Statement Today May Tell Wallace Side of Rift

Also Likely to See Truman; Spanking, But No Resignation Seen by Observers

Britain Is Relieved

Future Is Uncertain

By the United Press

Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, whose New York ease-upon-Russia speech shocked Administration Democrats and caused an international uproar, may issue a statement today touching on President Truman's repudiation of his remarks, it was reported last night.

Intimates of the former Vice President, who is still in New York, said he might have something to say about Mr. Truman renouncing his speech, after having approved it in advance, but that there was scant prospect of a Truman-Wallace break or that Wallace might quit the Cabinet.

Instead, it was said that he may visit Mr. Truman and display a willingness to wash out the matter as "unfortunate"—the same position the President took in his weekend statement describing his previous indorsement of the speech as a "natural misunderstanding."

Another Crossroads

However the matter is resolved, Wallace stands at another political crossroads reminiscent of the time when the late President Roosevelt publicly spanked him for his feud with former Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

Jones came off temporarily victorious in that dispute, which broke in the spring of 1944. That same summer Mr. Roosevelt by-passed Wallace and handed the vice presidential nomination to then Senator Harry Truman. But Wallace did not quit. Instead he pledged that he would continue to be a good New

Truman Attends Church Services At First Baptist

President Truman attended the First Baptist Church yesterday to hear the Scriptures prescribed for those "who face the confusion of the modern world."

The President walked the six blocks from the White House to the church at 16th and O sts. nw. and walked in without advance notice. Many of the congregation were unaware of his presence until he rose to leave.

He was accompanied by Secret Service men and returned to the White House by auto following the service.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor, spoke on "The Silver Lining," with Romans 8:28 as his text: "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God."

Dr. Pruden declared that the blame for the present tragic condition of our world should be laid at the door of "unregenerate humanity." "We have no right to expect our national leaders to devise a perfect plan for peace," he said, "because even if such a plan were offered us we would be neither spiritually prepared to appreciate it nor morally capable of supporting it. Only those who have been spiritually changed themselves are capable of changing the world."

The Finder Was Watching The Post

A lady was sorrowed to discover the loss of a piece of jewelry which carried great sentimental value for her. So she inserted this notice in The Washington Post classified section:

In Hurricane Area

Ship Breaks in Half Off N. C.; 14 Believed Lost, 24 Rescued

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 15 (AP)—The Norwegian motor tanker Marit II broke in half in the hurricane-lashed Atlantic 148 miles off the North Carolina coast and dispatches from rescue ships today showed the apparent loss of 14 lives.

First word of the 7417-ton vessel's foundering about noon yesterday came in a dispatch from the S. S. Pan Amoco whose master reported picking up 10 survivors.

As the Pan Amoco's radio crackled out additional information the Coast Guard already was dispatching the cutter Agassiz out of Norfolk and planes of its air-sea rescue division from stations along the coast. Tonight the American tanker Gulf Hawk reported she had taken a life raft alongside and picked up six additional survivors.

All the men were Norwegians and all appeared to be in "good to fair" condition, a message said.

Coast Guard headquarters here said they believed there were 38 men aboard the Marit II when she foundered.

Survivors aboard the Pan Amoco had messaged the Coast Guard earlier that they believed three of their ship's company were on the raft but that 19 others perished when the ship cracked in two in the stormy seas.

Seamen taken aboard the Pan Amoco reported to the Coast Guard that the halves of the Marit seemed to be remaining afloat when they drifted out of sight of her.

However, Lieut. Comdr. Gilbert R. Evans reported from his PBY search plane to his Coast Guard headquarters here that he sighted an oil slick extending for 35 miles but no sign of the ship sections. He said also that he saw an empty life raft near the site of the Marit's crackup shortly before the Coast Guard ordered its planes to return to base at sundown.

The Marit II, a 7417-ton motor tanker built in 1922, was bound for New York from Curacao, Netherlands West Indies.

Storm Warnings Removed

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Weather Bureau Office here announced today that all storm warnings posted yesterday along the eastern coast had been removed during the night.

The hurricane that caused the warnings was approximately 100 miles off Nova Scotia at 7:30 a. m. (EDT) today, was moving in a northeastward direction and had decreased considerably in intensity, the bureau added.

Slavs Protest MPs' 'Rough' Arrest of Six

U. S. Commander Says Trieste Incident Was 'Routine Triviality'

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—Belgrade newspapers said today the Yugoslav government has forwarded a note to the United States protesting "rough and irresponsible acts" by American troops in connection with the arrest of six Yugoslav soldiers in Trieste September 9.

In Trieste, Brig. Gen. Ridgely Gaither, acting commander of the U. S. Eighty-eighth Division, described the arrests as a "trifling incident" and said a board of inquiry probing into the Yugoslav charges had found "there was no instance of insult or abuse whatsoever." The six were arrested after a dynamite bomb was tossed into a house, blasting out one wall.

The Belgrade radio said the six soldiers were "cursed" by the American military police and that the MPs also "directed abusive language against the Yugoslav army."

Front-Page News

The Yugoslav newspapers splashed the announcement of the protest on front pages, but did not carry the text of the note, dispatches from Belgrade said.

Today's Belgrade broadcast said a Yugoslav army captain and four of his escorting soldiers were also jailed when they sought to inquire about their six comrades. The broadcast accused the Americans of subjecting all 11 to "unparalleled and provocative treatment" and demanded "exemplary punishment" for those responsible.

Gen. Gaither said the Yugoslav protest was "a great surprise." The incident, he said, was one that might arise at a military police station "anywhere at any time."

Soldier Pulls Gun

A Trieste dispatch said that when the Yugoslav captain and four soldiers showed up at police headquarters last Monday to make inquiry and demand the release of the arrested men, they found there only S/Sergt. Robert G. Webb of Richmond, Va., who could not understand the Yugoslavs. They could not speak English.

Webb told the board of inquiry, the dispatch continued, that he drew his gun for self-protection, commanded the Yugoslavs to stand back, then called for Provost Marshal Frank S. Ray.

Ray arrived with interpreters who discovered that the Yugoslavs' papers were all in order and ex-

Chiang Troops Drive to Split Communists

Push Deep Wedge Between 2 Major Red Strongholds

Nanking, Sept. 15 (AP).—With peace talks virtually abandoned, Chinese government armies today were driving deep wedges between Yenan and Kalgan, the two key Communist-held cities of China, in an apparent bid to conquer, or at least neutralize, by dividing the enemy.

Openly anticipating further reverses, the Communists vowed to keep struggling and said that the loss of bases would mean nothing while their field forces remained intact.

Observers in this government capital said that the fighting, so long of an apparently desultory nature, was unfolding as a definite program to push an armed barrier between Yenan and Kalgan, thus cutting off Yenan, the Communist capital, from communications and possibly capturing Kalgan.

Latest Chinese dispatches reported that government Gen. Ho Chung-nan, pushing north from the Yellow River, had reached Linfen and was pressing on toward Yangku (Taiyuan), government-held capital of Shansi Province, 135 miles farther northeast.

Linfen is only 100 miles southeast of Yenan, but government forces would have to cross the Yellow River to threaten that principal Communist center.

While Yenan was not directly

Another Clubbing Victim Is Found In Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Sept. 15 (AP).—A young juke box repairman was found bludgeoned to death today under a bridge here, the second victim of a club slaying here in the last five days.

Capt. Frank Dailey, acting chief of detectives, said the repairman, Leslie George Foddrill, 25, left his rooming house about 7 p. m. last night after telling his roommate, Raymond Jones, he was going on a "blind date."

Jones told police Foddrill did not tell him the girl's name.

Miss Alberta Green, 22-year-old student nurse, was clubbed to death early last Wednesday at a hospital in the Indiana University Medical center here.

Authorities said robbery apparently was not the motive for the latest slaying. Foddrill had $50, a ring and a watch which had not been taken by his assailant.

Outstanding War Record

General Wurtsmith, 4 Others Died in Mountain Crash of B-25

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Paul B. Wurtsmith, coinventor of skip-bombing, one of the three ranking airmen in the Pacific war, and four other Army men were killed when their B-25 bomber crashed into Cold Mountain near Waynesville, N. C. Friday.

The wreckage of the plane, which burned after crashing, was found by rangers for the Pisgah National Forest last night.

Planes from Bolling Field, Washington, and several other bases along the coast, had conducted a search for the plane since its disappearance enroute from Selfridge Field, Michigan, to Tampa, Fla., Friday.

On board with Wurtsmith were Lieut. Col. F. L. Tricket, Tampa; Lieut. Col. P. R. Okerbloom, Tampa; M/Sergt. Hosey W. Merritt, Geneva, Ala.; and S/Sergt. Hoyt W. Crump, Tampa.

General Wurtsmith was known among our flying soldiers as "Squeeze."

As a lieutenant colonel he arrived early in the Southwest Pacific area.

His Forty-ninth Fighter Group, which he took to Australia, blazed a record from Darwin, through New Guinea, into the Philippines and finally to Japan, that is unequalled among all the air forces in combat.

Its official record counts more than 700 enemy planes destroyed—and those who knew it in its early days would be willing to gamble that twice that number would be nearer the truth.

It was Wurtsmith who convinced the American flier in the Pacific that the P-40, properly flown and properly maneuvered, was as good as the Jap Zero.

It was Wurtsmith and another

U. S. to Push 3 Vital Issues At Parley

Questions Up Today

By Alexander Kendrick

Paris, Sept. 15.—Its present "tough" policy reaffirmed, the United States will take the initiative at the Paris Peace Conference this week on three of the most important conference issues, it was learned tonight.

It will speak tomorrow as the conference opens its eighth week, in the crucial Trieste debate to answer Soviet charges of attempting to "colonize" the vital Adriatic area and will insist on full internationalization of the new free territory.

At the same time American delegates will be pressing for economic equality in the Balkans and for freedom of navigation in the Danube as these issues come to the fore.

Test of Strength Seen

After the weekend in which the Wallace "incident" has been straightened out to the satisfaction of Secretary of State Byrnes and his two senatorial advisers, Vandenberg (R., Mich.), and Connally (D., Tex.), the delegations feels its hand may have actually been strengthened in further east-west dealings here.

Whether other countries will share this opinion will soon be made evident. In addition to the Trieste question which will probably not be resolved this week, tests of strength will come in commissions dealing with the future of eastern Europe.

In the Bulgarian political commission, the United States will seek the mutual demilitarization of the Greek-Bulgarian frontier against expected opposition of the eastern states.

In the Balkan Economic Commission, the United States will fight for equal trade opportunities in Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary and for restoration of prewar commercial rights for foreign commercial enterprises. It will be up against the same opposition.

Danube Conference Sought

Finally the United States will reiterate its request for a Danubian conference to settle the problem of free navigation of the waterway. It is asking for a conference made up of six Danubian states plus the Big Four powers while the Soviet Union, while agreeing to the principle of the meeting, wants it limited to the Danube states—Austria, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Differences over the tense Greek-Bulgarian frontier have already been responsible for the peace conference's most uproarious moment, when the chairman of the Bulgarian commission, Kuzma V. Kisselev, Foreign Minister of Byelorussia, walked out of the meeting which had been peremptorily adjourned while eight delegations stayed behind and held an unprecedented rump session to pass a motion of censure.

The United States, it can be said, will favor no frontier revisions for either Greece or Bulgaria although both countries have asked for changes.

Manslaughter Charged to Two Drivers

Two District drivers were charged with manslaughter with an automobile in nearby Maryland yesterday as an aftermath of three auto deaths in 12 hours.

The victims were:

Walton Davis, 12, of Elkridge, Md., struck by a car while riding his bicycle on Route 1 about 3:15 p. m. yesterday. The boy died at St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore.

Earl Nathaniel Ward, 21, of Deanwood, Md., killed when the car in which he was riding collided with another on Livingston rd., Oxon Hill, Md.

Edward Lanier, Philadelphia, Pa., shipyard worker, killed by a hit-run driver on Guilford rd., Savage, Md., at 3 a. m.

Waterloo, Md., State police said the driver of the car which struck the Davis boy was Louis Guglielmo, 48, of 2825 Branch ave. se. He was charged with manslaughter with an automobile and released on $200 bond for court appearance Tuesday.

Two-Car Collision

Driver of the car in which Ward was riding was Sylvester Boston, of Port Tobacco, Md., who was charged with reckless driving. Operators of the other auto in the two-car collision was listed as Frederick G. Jordan, 2512 Ontario rd. nw. Jordan was charged with manslaughter with an automobile, reckless driving, having no permit and unauthorized use of an automobile.

In the District, a 21-year-old sailor was described as in "fair condition" at Casualty Hospital after being struck by a car Saturday night in front of 644 Pennsylvania ave. se. The sailor was Fireman Third Class Harold D. Shuler, of Annapolis, Md. Driver of the car was Jack L. Wright, 33, of 3701 Minnesota ave. ne.

Johnny Neblett Killed in Crash Of Light Plane

Chicago, Sept. 15 (INS).—Johnny Neblett, nationally-known broadcaster of radio's "So the Story Goes," and Rice Buckingham, a Salem, Wis., salesman, were killed today when their light plane crashed on Tam o' Shanter Golf course near Chicago.

Neblett, about 35, was circling the course looking for a spot to land when, while hundreds of horrified Sunday golfers watched, their plane went out of control, spun in and dove into a steel fence near the sixteenth tee.

Ironically enough, Neblett crashed on the golf course where, just seven weeks ago, he did the commentary fo rthe ABC television network's broadcast of the All-American golf tournaments.

He married Angeline Orr, an actress, last December.

Julian Oliff, sr., 50, of 1336 Corbin pl. ne., a bank runner for the American Security & Trust Co., was under treatment for exposure at Casualty Hospital after a narrow escape Saturday night when he fell into the Potomac River off Fort Washington, Md. He was rescued by his son, Julian Oliff, jr., 27, also of the Corbin pl. address.

The Post Poll

D. C. Workers Evenly Divided On Lure of U. S., Other Jobs

(Expressions of Individual Opinion, Page 13)

Washingtonians are evenly divided in their opinions on whether it is preferable to work for the Federal Government, for private industry, or for themselves, it was revealed yesterday in the latest Post Poll.

Regardless of where they now work, thirty-three percent of all local wage earners prefer Federal employment; 31 per cent would rather work for private industry; and 32 percent would prefer to go into business for themselves. The remainder are undecided.

Of those now employed by the Government 36 per cent would prefer to work in private industry. On the other hand, only 14 per cent of those in private industry would prefer a Government job.

In the Washington area, for every five Federal employes, there are 7 workers in private industry. The Post Poll finds that 26 per cent of all adults in this area are employed by the Federal Government; 35 per cent are privately employed; and 39 percent, mostly housewives, are unemployed.

Federal employment is most frequently preferred because of its liberal vacations, lenient sick leave regulations, and better working conditions. The greater security of Civil Service is also mentioned by many.

Those who prefer private employment most frequently say that it offers a better chance for advancement, higher maximum salaries and freedom from red tape.

Opportunities for the exercise of individual initiative, a chance to make more money, and the satisfaction of "being your own boss" are mentioned by those who would prefer to go into business for themselves.

Post Pollers asked a representative cross-section of people living in the District and in nearby Maryland and Virginia suburbs: "Where would you (your husband) prefer to work—for Government, private industry, or for yourself?"

Here is the way they answered:

	Emp. by Fed. Gov.	Emp. by Priv. Ind.	All Workers
Pref. Fed. Emp.	36%	14%	33%
Pref. Priv. Ind.	10	39	31
Pref. Self.-Emp.	39	40	32
Don't know	5	6	4
	35%	39%	63%

A considerable number of both Federal workers and people employed in private industry think working for themselves most desirable.

People in the low income groups more often think Federal employment is preferable, while those in higher income groups prefer private industry, or going into business for themselves. Doubtless the relatively low salaries for top administrative and profession work-

FBI Swoops Down

Four Maryland Brothers Held In D. C. Car-Stripping Raid

The FBI yesterday announced the arrest of four brothers in nearby Maryland in connection with the stripping of automobiles stolen in the District.

Director J. Edgar Hoover said special agents, Maryland State Police of the Waldorf barracks and Prince Georges County police arrested the four simultaneously at 8710 Livingston rd., Chapel Hill.

No resistence was encountered, the FBI said, but the raiders confiscated a .12 gauge shotgun and a loaded .38 caliber revolver with extra ammunition.

Four Men Arrested

Those arrested and charged with conspiracy to violate the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act are:

Maxwell David Swann, 29, former mail carrier and farmer, with a record of one sentence for liquor law violations and several arrests for assault investigation, hit and run, larceny and burglary.

Joseph Griffin Swann, 33, former laborer with a record of three sentences for liquor violations and disorderly conduct.

Pennal Peter Swann, 26, former truck driver, arrested in 1942 for assault with intent to kill.

James Leinkins Swann, 21, former farmer and laborer.

Hoover revealed that the men were suspected when articles found in or near stripped automobiles hidden in the densely wooded areas in Maryland were traced to them.

The common practice in stealing cars was for the thief first to break into the "no draft" ventilator window, he said. The vehicle was then pushed to a convenient location where the ignition switch was bypassed by means of a "coil jumper." Then the car was driven to a remote area where it was stripped of tires, wheels and other accessories.

The FBI credited Trooper Melvin Gent of the Maryland State police and Officers Wilson J. Purdy and John W. Siddall of the Prince Georges County police department with aiding the investigation leading to the arrests yesterday.

Two-Month Investigation

The arrests culminated a two-month investigation by the FBI into theft of cars stolen from the District.

Conviction on the conspiracy charge carries a maximum fine of $10,000 or two years in prison, or both, for each offence.

The four will be arraigned before a United States Commissioner today, the FBI said.

Police, Fire Budgets Show Big Increase

Increases of 19 and 42 Per Cent Over Last Year Requested

The District Fire Department is requesting $4,423,000, amounting to an increase of 42 per cent over current funds, in its budget estimates for next year.

A $6,230,000 appropriation, which is an increase of 19 per cent over current funds, is requested by the Metropolitan Police Force.

The Fire Department estimates include a request for $480,000 for construction of three new fire engine houses, while the Police Department estimates provide for $105,000 for a new precinct station house.

Ask Increased Forces

Both departments ask for additional funds to provide for increased forces and new equipment and to meet the higher maintenance costs for existing buildings and equipment.

The three new fire engine houses are to be located at 49th and East Capitol sts. se., 24th and Irving sts. se., and 42nd st. and Tunlow rd. nw. Studies were made in all three areas and fire protection was found to be inadequate.

An additional $24,000 is requested to purchase building sites at the first two locations. The third site is Federally owned and can be transferred to the District Government.

26 New Firemen

The Fire Department is asking that 26 new men be added to the force. They include: a chief deputy marshal to provide around the clock service of the fire marshal and his deputies, 3 officers and 12 privates for rescue squad number 2, 4 inspectors, 1 typist, 4 mechanics and 1 lieutenant, who will serve on the training staff. District Begins Tax Hearings At 10 Today

Board of Trade Plea For Economy Keynote Of Public Discussion

Ways to provide Washington with 1947 spending money will be taken up at 10 a. m. today when public hearings on the budget open in the District Building.

An economy move, designed to lessen the need for new taxes, will launch the hearing when Maj. Gen. David McCoach, chairman of the Board of Trade's Municipal Finance Committee, keynotes the Board's revenue policy.

At least 30 spokesmen for civic, business and labor groups will have 10 minutes each to present views on the proposed 136-million-dollar budget. Principal focal point will be the Commissioners' tax committee recommendation for a 2 per cent sales tax.

The sales tax proposal goes into the hearing with the blessings of Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee. McMillan, in the city for two weeks, said he will try to attend the opening hearing.

Ranged against sales tax proponents will be the labor groups and the Washington Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Navy Now Big Enough, Adm. Nimitz Declares

Philadelphia, Sept. 15 (AP)—Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz said today the present United States Navy of 500,000 men, one sixth of the wartime peak, is "large enough" and he advocated an annual inventory looking toward the possibility of shrinking it still further.

"Everyone is out of the Navy now who wanted to be out, except for 3000 hospital attendants caring for 30,000 wounded men," the chief of naval operations told a news conference. Nimitz added that demobilization of Navy materiel is expected to be completed next April.

Sees No Market Collapse

Housing Inflation to Be Curbed In October, Wyatt Believes

By the United Press

Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt said yesterday there was a good chance the inflationary spiral in housing costs would be halted in October.

The housing chief, in an interview, discounted reports recently attributed to Government economists that the housing industry is about to price itself out of a market.

Costs of new homes for veterans—which he conceded are too high—must not be compared with prewar housing prices, he said.

"With a 275-billion-dollar national debt, we can't talk about normal prices," he said. "We can't pay off such a debt and at the same time see prices return to prewar."

All costs are up, he said. The whole economy is now geared to prices higher than before the war.

He said that criticism of the veterans' emergency housing program—and attacks on its economic soundness—will probably increase in the next few weeks. "Housing will definitely be an issue in the election," he added.

Also certain to prompt sincere complaints is the national conviction that, since the housing crisis appears to be getting worse, the program must have failed.

It is true, Wyatt said, that the peak of the housing shortage will not be reached until winter. Though hundreds of thousands of homes are being built, demand is growing even faster.

Recent drastic cuts in nonresidential construction and other steps taken to speed the flow of materials to veterans' homes should serve to stabilize costs "in the immediate future," he said.

Meantime some veterans are paying too much for their homes, but not to an extent that endangers the housing economy, he said.

Coast Guard Asked To Stand By as Mass Picketing Is Ordered in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—East Coast ship owners and National Maritime Union, CIO, representatives broke off negotiations late today and the operators notified the Coast Guard to stand by because of "extremely hazardous" conditions existing on struck vessels left without security watches.

The break in negotiations came after the New York strike committee ordered mass picketing of the entire port by approximately 30,000 men from 4 a. m. to 8 a. m. E. D. T. tomorrow.

Charges of bad faith were made by both union and company representatives when a meeting with Frederick R. Livingston, representing the United States Conciliation Service, ended at the American Merchant Marine Institute.

West Coast Negotiations Awaited

A spokesman for the operators said the companies "can't proceed" with negotiations until they were sure that safety watches would be maintained on all vessels. The local strike committee early today issued a directive which ordered that security watches, which maintain steam and protective operations, be eliminated on all except ships with perishable cargoes.

The ship owners also maintained that they felt it was "futile to continue" attempts to reach a settlement while the union insisted that it could not enter into a final agreement until negotiations were under way on the West Coast.

In a telegram to the Coast Guard, company representatives asked that such remedial action as was deemed necessary be taken to avert damage aboard unprotected struck vessels.

Livingston, personal representative of Edgar L. Warren, Conciliation Service chief in Washington, said that Washington officials would continue efforts to get West Coast negotiations under way. Earlier he said that chances of agreement here appeared good if West Coast negotiations could be established.

Stevedores Cross Lines

All strikers not on picket watches were instructed to report to union hall this afternoon for assignments in the mass picket line which will extend throughout the harbor tomorrow, a spokesman at the NMU headquarters said.

The spokesman said the demonstration would effectively show seamen and longshoremen the strength of the strike. AFL International Longshoremen's Association President Joseph P. Ryan previously announced that his union would respect NMU picket lines at least "until Monday." Ryan, however, ordered stevedores to cross a picket line when the U. S. Lines' Washington docked here yesterday.

The directive tightening strike policy contained two provisions in addition to the restriction on security watch. Local strike committees in every port were instructed that all ships must be completely struck, including foreign flag vessels but excluding tankers.

They also were ordered to make every effort to have crews paid off on foreign vessels except where, in the opinion of the strike committee, it was dangerous to remove men from vessels at anchor.

U. S. Airlines Seek Cure for Ailments

All-Weather Operation and Better Control Of Traffic at Airports Among Present Goals

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

(Second of a Series)

America's youngest transport industry is a bit sick to its stomach and there are two schools of thought about a cure.

One group holds that the trouble is nothing serious and prescribes the usual remedies. The other is greatly concerned and is urging a drastic course of treatment.

The patient—the airlines of the United States—agrees with the latter. Convinced that it is no hypochondriac, it wants to get well.

Symptoms are the high percentage of cancellations and delays of scheduled flights during the airlines' biggest boom year. And the conclusion of some disgusted passengers that it is quicker and more comfortable to go by train than take-off late and then fly for an hour or so in the "stack" over a partially weathered-in airport.

Control System Outdated

The trouble, as most airline people see it, is that the air navigation system in use on American airways is very much out-of-date. It has remained the same for more than a decade—while many other phases of aviation were moving ahead at high speed.

Problems of air traffic control around airports, and landing of planes in low visibility must be reconsidered and drastically revised, they hold.

"Something radical must be done if we are to fly the number of planes we expect to 5 or 10 years from now," an Air Transport Association executive told The Post.

"There is a good possibility that we then will want to run three times the present number of scheduled flights into key airports. Besides this, a great increase in private flying is expected.

"What is the capacity of our present system—fields, landing facilities, technical equipment, etc? Why, we cannot even carry our present peak loads. Therefore, it is plain that we must change our entire thinking about traffic handling."

Regarded as Conservative

This estimate of the increase in airline planes is regarded by some as conservative. At present there are something like 700 craft making scheduled flights. Estimates of the number of charter planes range all the way from 1000 to 2700.

Brig. Gen. Milton W. Arnold, former AAF flier and now vice president of the Air Transport Association, recently told Congress that he considered the air navigation and traffic control problem the "most vital" now before the air transport industry.

He declared that the air traffic control problem in New York City alone is "ten to twenty times more complex" than the war-time job of sending 1500 bombers from England to Germany and back at once.

Program Is Needed

Army and Navy experts in this field agree with airline officials that the problem can be solved only by: (1) laying down a definite and positive American air navigation policy; (2) drafting and getting started now on a sizable procurement and research program backed by a united effort and ample funds; (3) carrying out the program under vigorous and progressive Government leadership.

"We can't do it by 'muddling through' as we are doing now," says Col. Budd J. Peaslee, chief of the Air Office of All-Weather Flying. "What is needed is an entirely new system of controlling air traffic. Instead of permitting the individual pilot largely to go his own way, we must have a system of compact control in the crowded approaches to airports."

Others concerned in the well-being of American aviation take a different view of the entire situation. Among them are a number of top officials of the CAA. They see nothing very serious wrong with United States civil air transport.

"The difficulties of the air transport industry today are worse than those of other American industries," says Acting CAA Administrator Charles Stanton.

Not the Real Problem

The "stacking" of transport planes over main airports and long delays in landing during bad weather is not the real problem in Stanton's eyes.

"That's just the rash on the skin," he says. "The trouble is that airlines are scheduling too many planes into certain airports during peak traffic hours. That's the cause. When the weather gets bad the full effect of this appears.

"The answer: (1) more airports and (2) for the airlines to install the radio equipment and train their pilots so they can use the instrument landing system now being installed at principal airports."

Stanton declares that agitation for the acceptance of newer, more modern and more involved equipment of this type has delayed the installation of the CAA glidepath-localizer system—that now going in—for the past decade.

Must Start Sometime

"People said 'wait till next year, we'll have something developed then that's much better'," he stated. "I say the thing to do is to shut up, put in what you've got and then wait and see how it solves the problem. The research people will be making improvements for the next 25 years."

Eleborate systems of traffic control, involving radar and employing various automatic features—as visualized by some persons in aviation—are not considered practical by the deputy CAA administrator.

Stanton spoke of the "hundreds of trick gadgets developed by the Army and Navy during the war" and declared that the CAA would like to "play with them all" if it had the money.

"We have to justify every cent we get to the Budget Bureau and Congress," he declares. "The Federal airways system now costs about 40 millions a year to operate. It would cost at least ten times that much if we put in an elaborate new system employing all these new ideas.

"And it would also add so much load to transport planes that they would be uneconomical to operate."

Pilots Are Skeptical

Lined up on the conservative side in the present controversy is the Airline Pilots Association. Many veteran pilots view with great skepticism any new system which would put greater control over his plane in the airport tower—as seems inevitable in any new system controlling the increased air traffic expected in the future.

President Dave D. Behncke of the pilot's union is on record as wanting to go slow on a new radar-type device. A spokesman of ALPA here declared that while there were varying points of view among the transport pilots, "our people are mostly ultra-conservative, slow to adopt new-fangled ideas."

The more forward thinking of airline men grant that some of Deputy Administrator Stanton's comments are justified. They say that schedules must be revised to some extent; that arrivals at points like New York and Washington must be spread more over the day; that while most passengers want to get to their destination during certain hours of the day, it probably isn't practicable to do so.

They agree that more airports are necessary. They concede that one reason for the delay in putting in the glidepath-localizer instrument landing system has been the arguments of backers of rival systems and the eternal desire of technical men to reach perfection.

All Things in Time

Certainly the long-delayed instrument landing system should go ahead. Certainly more airports are necessary. But they say that all this and far more will be required if aviation is to go ahead in the way they hope.

They wholly disagree with the argument of "put in what we have ready and wait and see." They deny that a new traffic-control system based on electronics is economically or otherwise impracticable. Instead of opposition, they want progressive, vigorous leadership from the Government.

(Why doesn't radar prevent aviation crashes, many people ask? In tomorrow's Post Mr. Norris answers this question and outlines the advantages and disadvantages of this new aid.)

Foreign Plans Complicate Tariff-Cutting

By the Associated Press

High tariff policies advocated in a number of foreign countries are complicating United States plans to lower prewar trade barriers, Government officials said yesterday.

Several nations seeking to industrialize have made it plain that, while favoring the United States approach to the problem, they feel a need for high tariffs to protect new industries.

Since American trade proposals center around the simultaneous cutting of tariffs by all countries, American government trade experts acknowledge their task appears more difficult than first contemplated.

Learned in Conferences

The United States has learned of the high-tariff attitude of various countries through recent conferences held by State Department commercial experts with trade representatives of other governments.

Although officials decline to identify the nations that expressed such sentiments, it is known that countries like Brazil, Mexico, Chile, India and Australia have industrialization programs under way or blueprinted.

These authorities say that some foreign countries point to the record of the American Government as a high tariff nation and tell American officials, in effect, that the United States is seeking to keep them from providing the same governmental aid.

The United States has denied any such motive and has pointed to its more recent record in providing financial and technical assistance abroad.

Suggests Subsidizing

The American Government also has emphasized to these countries, officials say, that it realizes their new industries will need economic protection but asks that they consider the possibility of subsidizing them temporarily.

These officials say the United States may be willing to help poorer nations with loans from the Export-Import Bank or by backing their application before the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

By following such a course, these officials believe the countries could afford needed protection to new industries while joining other nations in lowering tariffs and taking other measures to increase trade.

These trade authorities express the belief that some sort of international arrangement permitting the use of government subsidies under such circumstances can be worked out when the subsidy question is examined at the American-sponsored trade conference in 1947.

Clothes Designer Has Close Call At Grand Canyon

Grand Canyon, Ariz., Sept. 15.—De De Johnson, 33, of Los Angeles, well-known designer of women's sport clothes, narrowly escaped death today when she fell from the rim of Grand Canyon to a sloping ridge 50 feet down where she clung to a ledge until three forest rangers rescued her.

She was standing on a small retaining wall, posing for a picture for her husband, Harold Kronthal, when she slipped and fell. Miss Johnson suffered shock, a sprained left foot and rope burns. She was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Bride of Two Weeks Among Fire Victims

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 15 (AP).—The Great Northern Hotel fire claimed its second life today—that of a 17-year-old bride of two weeks.

Mrs. Martha Adams died of burns she suffered in the early morning blaze that yesterday destroyed the 50-year-old, 75-room brick building. Her husband, Jimmy Adams, was among eight persons still in hospitals with burns and other injuries.

Toledo Committee Points Way To Labor-Management Peace

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

(This is the thirteenth article in a series by Alfred Friendly, now on an extensive tour sounding opinions of labor and management on prospects for industrial peace and all-out production.)

Toledo, Sept. 15.—This city has taken the uncommon course of applying common sense to the problem of industrial relations. It works.

It works so well, indeed, that two other cities, St. Louis and Louisville, are now in process of adopting the same scheme. In essence, that scheme is one in which the community assumes responsibility for maintaining labor peace.

It has had formal status for less than three months and is still short of full-scale operation. Accordingly, it is not yet possible to call the new Toledo plan an unqualified success or to say with finality that the infallible elixir for transmuting strife into amity has been found.

Enlightened Approach Essential

Indeed, as is pointed out below, the plan has some severe limitations and depends for success on certain enlightened attitudes by both labor and management which are not universally found.

Even so, within these limitations, the system adopted in Toledo offers the best hope for good labor-management relations of any new development encountered by this observer in a tour of half a dozen industrial cities.

The procedure is carried out by what is known as a Labor-Management Citizens' Committee, established within the city government of Toledo and dignified by the authority of a municipal ordinance.

Since its formal inception last June 15, it has settled 71 work stoppages (most had begun before the committee was in effective operation), averted nine strikes, and arranged meetings between the disputants which prevented three other strikes.

Committee of Eighteen

The committee is comprised of 18 men, 6 of each representing labor, management and the public. More important, they are the top men of the city—the six most powerful union officials and the six most representative business tycoons.

The public members consist of the deputy mayor, a Federad judge, the dean of business administration of the University of Toledo, and a priest, a rabbi and a Protestant clergyman.

They handle disputes either as a group or through a three-man panel of their membership, appointed to perform a conciliation or mediation task.

When a dispute arises in a Toledo-area establishment, the matter is either referred to the committee voluntarily or else the committee offers its services. It attempts to intervent in every dispute except those which the Federal Conciliation Service already has under control.

The committee's outstanding success to date has been dependent on several factors:

1. The prestige of its members. No one in the city can speak on industrial and labor matters with more authority than the 12 management and union members. No alternates are allowed on the committee, with the result that only the top men do the work, rather than "messenger boy" labor relations officials or second-string union stooges.

The rules for attendance of the two regularly scheduled meetings a month are rigorously applied. The third miss and you're out. The rule was invoked in the case of Charles E. Sorensen, famed automotive engineer and a mighty power in the community. After his third absence he was bounced. Sorensen didn't like it, but his discharge from office provied that the committee took its job seriously and meant business.

2. The sincerity and good will of the members. It is conceded that if a majority of the industry members were fundamentally antiunion and opposed to collective bargaining, or if a majority of the unionists were anti-free enterprise, the committee would founder.

Tradition of Cooperation

3. A tradition of cooperation between the CIO and AFL in Toledo and the absence of intense interunion raiding activity.

4. A process of education, lasting almost a year, during which committee members got to know each other—their purposes, problems and abilities.

5. A basic charter of principles and procedures worked out by the committee, ratified by the city, and now in the process of being subscribed to by the companies and union organizations in the area.

(This educational process and the charter which emerged from it will be discussed in detail in tomorrow's article in this series.)

It is obvious from its operations that the Labor-Management Citizens' Committee has one serious limitation; it can function only in labor disputes of local origin.

Toledo Becoming a Model

If the General Motors empire is shut down by a strike, the committee cannot keep the Detroit plant of GM at work and can do little to resolve the issues in the dispute. Similarly, if there are Nation-wide strikes over industry-wide issues—welfare funds, a new wage pattern, etc.—the committee cannot immunize Toledo from their effects.

But in the great majority of cases, such as the irritating stoppages resulting from grievances, local issues and even big problems in locally owned plants, the committee is making Toledo a model for the country to watch—and, conceivably, to follow.

(Tomorrow Mr. Friendly will outline the origin of the Toledo labor plan, discuss its far-sighted charter of industrial relations and tell how labor and management were educated into cooperation.)

Why Not Wear Grass Skirts in Tahiti Shortage?

San Francisco, Sept. 15 (AP).—There's a clothing shortage on Tahiti, too, and the wail comes from the mere male.

A. C. Rowland, Associated Press correspondent at Papeite, sent this report which arrived today:

"Unless dresswear situation improves, we in the islands will be compelled to return to the grass skirt. All men (both European and Tahitian) have become accustomed to wear in the privacy of their homes the long, soft-textured island kilt, known as the pareau. . . .

"Supplies of pareau cloth have long ago disappeared. We have patched and mended our kilts until little of the original material remains. Some unfortunates have been reduced to wearing pareau fashioned from old tablecloths."

New Assistant At Alice Deal Taught Army

FRANK A. STUTZ
Appointed Assistant Principal

Frank A. Stutz, who will take over the job of assistant principal at Alice Deal Junior High School this fall, couldn't get away from schools, even during 62 months as an Army officer through the war.

"At first I was upset because they wouldn't send me overseas. They kept me here in training activities. But now I realize it was very valuable experience in education," he explains.

As a captain in the Reserves, he was called to actvie duty in 1941. He was a teacher of science and mathematics at Alice Deal at the time.

Attended Three Schools

His more than five years of service saw him attending the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the Chemical Warfare School at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., and the Ordnance Schools at Aberdeen, Md., and Atlanta, Ga.

"Then I taught just about everything. I started an artillery mechanics' course. I taught courses on preparing dehydrated foods, on all angles of radio, shoe repair, textile repair, laundry, and I even trained a class of 1500 nurses at one time," he says.

He supervised other instructors, and at one time commanded a battalion and later a regiment of special training units, composed of men who could neither read nor write and therefore could not be given technical basic training.

Made Lieutenant Colonel

Promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel in 1943, he was released from active duty last December and reinstated as a teacher at Alice Deal. He was appointed a teacher in 1933.

"This new job is the assignment I wanted," Stutz declared, adding that it will be the same type of work he did in the Army but on a much smaller scale.

Southern Democrats Berate Committee for New Dealism

New rumblings of discontent arose yesterday among Southern Democrats long at odds with the party's National Committee officials.

The Southerners are irked right now about an article in the Democrat, official party organ, which comments approvingly on the defeat for renomination of Representatives Slaughter (D., Mo.) and Boren (D., Okla.).

The article, by Democratic National Publicity Director Sam O'Neal, termed rejection of the two legislators typical of a trend against those who have "opposed and obstructed the progressive Roosevelt-Truman program."

Names Group of 20.

The two were referred to as members of a group of about 20 "dissident Democrats" who, O'Neal said, united with Republicans "in defeating or amending to death" some legislation proposed by President Truman.

One of O'Neal's strongest critics was Representative Cox (D., Ga.), a leader of the Southern group. He handed a reporter a statement terming the article "one of the most offensive things I've seen."

Cox also declared the article represented "a breach of the understanding" he said was reached this spring "to the effect that the National Democratic Committee would not intervene in primary contests between Democrats."

The Georgian added in reference to O'Neal that "his gloating over the retirement of Democrats makes me wonder whose stooge he is . . . and certainly emphasizes the need of knowing whether the committee represents the party as a whole or if it is a tool of a strongly organized and well-financed minority."

Gossett Assails Article

Representative Gossett (D., Tex.) said the article will be "one more black mark against the committee" which the Southerners will use in trying to change its makeup and policies later.

Previously, the Southerners have battled with National Committee Chairman Robert Hannegan over a speech he made criticizing some of them as not having followed the party's legislative program closely. They also were aroused over an article in the Democratic Digest some time ago which said every vote for the Case labor dispute bill was "a vote against the American people."

Walter Lippmann Called 'Troubador' Of the 'Imperialists'

Moscow, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Soviet periodical New Times said today "imperialist circles" at the Paris Peace Conference were working feverishly for practical fulfillment of "a wide program of diplomatic and military expansion, a race for armaments and creation of a world-wide system of naval and aviation bases."

The authoritative publication said imperialist forces were attempting to undermine the structure of the future peace and "everywhere, far and wide, are sowing poisonous seeds of distrust and discord."

'Reactionary' Press Hit

New Times devoted another article to the Soviet proposal to the United Nations Security Council that nations supply information on the numbers of their armed forces on any foreign soil save that of former enemy countries.

This, the article said, "was met with bayonets by all the reactionary Anglo-American press."

The article charged that "regardless of where the forces of the 'establishment of law and order' there immediately begin quarrels, disorder, internecine killing, armed clashes, battles and flare-ups, and the blood of guiltless people flows."

Walter Lippmann Assailed

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia attacked Walter Lippmann, foreign affairs columnist of the New York Herald Tribune and The Washington Post, as the "ardent troubador of imperialist circles in the United States," and assailed him for defending the idea of a display of American naval strength in the Mediterranean.

Commentator R. Moran wrote that Lippmann was "too experienced a rascal not to understand that despite all the verbal rubbish, the real aim of American penetration into the Mediterranean is hard to hide."

"It merely remains to recommend to Mr. Lippmann to refresh his memory in the lessons of history," the article said. "Maybe he will recall some facts about when a self-confident aggressor, carrying out a policy of 'taking open risks,' suffered shameful failure."

Nations Gird For Fight on Home for U. N.

Paris, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—An all-out fight is expected at the forthcoming General Assembly to switch the United Nations from its temporary headquarters at New York to a permanent home in Geneva, peace conference delegates said today.

When the question of a permanent site is again discussed at the October 23 Assembly session in New York, delegates here predicted a three-cornered fight among New York, San Francisco and Geneva, with the odds on Geneva. They based their forecast on the Soviet Union's sudden liking for the Swiss city.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky reasoned last year that, first, Russia had no diplomatic relations with Switzerland and therefore the choice of Geneva would not please his government and, second, that a New World organization should be established in the New World.

Geneva Now "Convenient"

Since that time Russia has resumed its diplomatic link with Switzerland and Vishinsky recently told his big three colleagues that Geneva would be "convenient" for the next General Assembly.

There is a second factor, however—hard cash—and it is always uppermost in the minds of the little nations. Geneva's glistening Palace of Nations, unique in the world, stands ready to absorb the whole United Nations machinery. The United Nations already has bought it for 10 million dollars.

Early estimates on cost of constructing an elaborate new home on the Eastern Seaboard of the United States are in the neighborhood of 100 million dollars. In addition, the new organization in New York is confronted with a higher cost of living problem than in Switzerland and a lack of housing.

The small city of Geneva—on the other hand—grew in stature with one purpose—to cater to the complex needs of a world organization and to care for a huge international secretariat.

Reopening the whole question of a permanent U. N. site will give Austria an opportunity once more to champion the cause of San Francisco, where the charter was signed. Australia probably will be backed by New Zealand, China, Chile, Ecuador and other Latin American countries.

Against this sentiment will be thrown the increased weight of the Geneva supporters, probably including the United Kingdom, prompted by the Russian change in sentiment.

Ukraine Charges Up

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Debate on the Soviet Ukraine's charges that British-supported Greeks are meddling with peace in the Balkans was scheduled for resumption in the United Nations Security Council tomorrow at Lake Success.

The American delegate, Herschel V. Johnson, was reported recovered tonight from a slight illness which caused postponement of the debate last Friday.

In the midst of debate on the Balkan question deeply concerning Russia and her satellites, Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko takes over from Oscar Lange of Poland as council chairman on Tuesday under the system rotating the presidency each month.

Gromyko also will be in the chair when the council reaches the next item on its provisional agenda: a Soviet demand for statistics as of August 1 on the dispositions of Allied troops and land and sea bases in all alien nonenemy countries throughout the world.

Faroes Vote Freedom By 150-Vote Margin

Copenhagen, Sept. 15 (AP).—Preliminary reports on yesterday's plebiscite on whether the Faroe Islands shall be independent from Denmark showed 5650 islanders had voted for independence to 5500 for the government plan of continuing as part of Denmark.

A government source said it would take some time before the full result would be available since reports on the balloting must be collected by primitive communications from each of the 17 small islands lying midway between Iceland and the British Isles.

Independents Lead Vote in British Zone

Hamburg, (Monday) Sept. 16 (AP).—Independent candidates took an impressive lead today in district elections in the British zone of Germany, while mounting returns showed the left wing Social Democrats were running in second place ahead of the Christian Democrats, right-of-center party.

The Communists, according to late returns from yesterday's balloting, were making a surprisingly weak showing.

Political circles attributed the independent strength largely to the desire of many voters and candidates to wait and see which party makes the strongest showing before registering their affiliations. They predicted the political parties would show more power in the larger district elections on October 13.

Those who cast independent votes, they said, included disgruntled conservatives who are dissatisfied with all parties, a Danish minority which desires the reunion of Schleswig Holstein with Denmark, and a silent Communist faction whose candidates were unwilling to risk assuming a Red label.

The lack of strength shown by the Communists in the early returns caused some surprise since it had been commonly believed that they would cash in on the general distress of British zone Germans who have been on short rations and recently were told that they must expect to go without coal this winter.

SED Heads in Soviet Zone

Berlin (Monday) Sept. 16 (AP).—Early returns today gave the Soviet-backed, Communist-dominated Socialist Unity Party (SED) a two-to-one plurality over its two major opponents in yesterday's concluding elections in the Russian occupation zone of Germany, held in the predominantly argricultural province of Brandenburg and the state of Mecklenburg.

Reporting of India Riots Hit

Bombay, India, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Bombay authorities today cracked down on newspapers whose reporting of riots "tend to foster communal hatred," as Moslem-Hindu civil strife entered its third week in Bombay flaring suddenly and violently at Ahmedabad, 200 miles away.

The chief magistrate of Bombay served notice on M. H. Saiyid, editor and publisher of the English-language weekly newspaper Star, not to publish reports, photographs or comments relating to riots without the magistrate's consent.

The announcement said similar restrictions would be placed on other newspapers "whose reports of riots tend to foster communal hatred."

The Star was founded by Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League.

Two persons were killed and 14 injured in knife fights today in Bombay, raising the total casualties since September 1 to 262 slain and 791 wounded.

Britain Finds Truman Stand 'Very Pleasing'

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—British official quarters expressed relief today over President Truman's assurance that Henry Wallace's foreign affairs speech did not represent a change in American foreign policy.

A spokesman said the foreign office was "very pleased" at President Truman's statement.

British officials had expressed surprise and indicated deep concern when it appeared that the Secretary of Commerce's stand against "British imperialism" had presidential indorsement.

"We feel that Mr. Wallace was wrong but his speech was an independent expression and everyone is entitled to express his own opinion," the Foreign Office officials said.

Called Attack on Britain

Lord Kemsley's Sunday Times, which supports the labor government's foreign policy, described Wallace's speech as "an attack on Great Britain" and said Wallace proposed exactly what Russia wanted—"the separation of American policy from British and the sacrifice of Britain by America."

The influential columnist "Scrutator" added that Russian, not British, imperialism was the source of trouble in the Mediterranean.

The Sunday Observer blamed the confusion over Wallace's speech on the American system of government, saying neither Mr. Truman "nor any President can prevent the American Constitution from producing nonsensical situations."

The newspaper contrasted the American system with the British system by which cabinet ministers are members of Parliament responsible to the House of Commons and to one another.

Moscow Radio Comments

The Moscow radio, commenting on Wallace's speech, said the audience cheered Wallace and Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) "when they condemned imperialism and speculation on the war menace, but booed and shouted down certain of Wallace's statements against the U.S.S.R."

The Soviet radio commentator said those speeches and recent statements of Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) had opened a United States election campaign in which "the forces of reaction and progressive forces meet again."

"The progressive elements in the United States are repulsing the present-day instigators of war," the commentator said, adding that "prominent leaders of American reaction," among whom he listed Taft, had "remarked with satisfaction that the activity of reactionary Republicans was having its influence on the policy of the Democratic Government."

Wallace Gets 26 Words

Moscow, Sept. 15 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Wallace's foreign policy speech rated 26 words in the Russian press today.

Senator Pepper and Paul Robeson, who spoke at the same meeting, fared better. The Florida Senator received 760 words, mostly quotations, in a Tass dispatch from New York, while Robeson received 114.

In Byrnes Speech

Welles Sees Good-Will Bid To Germans

By the Associated Press

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, said yesterday that this Nation, with Britain's support, is "making a feverish attempt to gain the good will of the German people" to offset Russia's increasing influence over the German masses."

Welles drew this meaning from Secretary of State Byrnes' Stuttgart speech, he said in a talk recorded for his weekly broadcast. Steps proposed by Byrnes, he declared, imply "grave dangers" to world peace and our own national safety.

According to Byrnes, our Government favors rapid return of the German peoples' right to determine their destinies within a united Germany under a centralized government, Welles said. The speaker expressed fear such action now would give "the new agents of the German general staff" opportunity to lead toward the militaristic policies which started the war.

Hurried establishment of a politically-united Germany under a central authority would lack "the indispensable foundation for any real federal union of Germany—namely, the will of the German people themselves," said Welles.

He declared the only way to create a real United States of Germany would be through Allied decision to restore to the traditional German states their pre-1870 independence. Only after many years of experience with local autonomy could a safe united Germany be set up, he reasoned.

Voices French Disapproval

Nancy, France, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Vice Premier Francisque Gay today expressed belated but official French disapproval of United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' Stuttgart speech which urged that the Ruhr and Rhineland remain a part of Germany.

"It is possible that in settlement of Europeean affairs, and especially German affairs, our point of view and yours do not yet coincide entirely," Gay said.

Gay spoke at ceremonies commemorating the second anniversary of the liberation of Nancy by General Patton's Third Army, against the backdrop of a huge picture of Patton. He earlier presided at a ceremony in which a street was renamed "Rue de L'Armee Patton."

Guerillas, Led by Communists, Wage Bloody War in Greece

By Seymour Freidin

Athens, Sept. 15.—Fierce civil war with no quarter given or asked, is raging in northern Greece, around the Yugoslav and Bulgarian frontiers, and in the hills of Mount Olympus.

The Royalist government, regular army troops and gendarmarie are engaged in night and day operations against government-described "Communist" bands, deployed guerilla fashion, in the mountains of Thessaly and Macedonia, particularly outside Salonika and Lake Doiran, near Yugoslavia.

Full fledged fighting broke out a month ago, but only since the plebiscite have the operations assumed the status of civil war.

Civilian populations are not spared. Women and children, charged with being related to the men in the hills, are packed off to exile on barren islands, or herded in large numbers in overcrowded prisons. In retaliation, the guerillas are seizing Royalist supporters and gendarmes as hostages.

In some areas, particularly the Elasona district of Thessaly, en route to Mount Olympus, the "rebels" control 46 of the 48 communities and the district commander there became so enraged that he asked the guerillas to "some out of the hills and fight like men."

The prevalent sentiment among officials in these areas, is that all nonmonarchists are per se Communists. They say they will hunt them down and exterminate them. The hunted know they are fighting for their lives and have mined roads and bridges and killed scores of soldiers and gendarmes, culminating in an ambush near Salonika last Friday, when they wiped out a convoy of 54 gendarmes.

Hundreds of young men, anti-royalist in conviction, have fled their villages and found refuge in Yugoslavia. That they have found sanctuary across the border was told reporters by their relatives. That they have come under Communist leadership in many cases appears likely, because they slip back and forth across the frontier without any trouble, except from their pursuers.

Although the government in Athens may be inclined to pooh-pooh the extent of the fighting, their supernumeraries to the north are quite aware of the gravity of conditions. Reinforcements were moving up from Vlos to Larissa all week, but the fighting, instead of subsiding, has burned fiercer.

The attitude of so many officials in denouncing all nonmonarchist elements as Communists, is driving bewildered and fearful genuine Republican anti-Communist elements into the hands of the Communists.

There appears, at least in the areas visited, one of two alternatives—either complete obeisance to the royalists or shelter among the Leftists in the hills, where the Communist leadership is thoroughly disciplined and well versed in guerilla tactics.

The guerillas are well armed and operate usually in small, compact bands. They raid villages and cut main roads where pursuit may be facilitated. Charges were made, however, by some UNRRA officials in the disturbed districts, both American and British, that the Government might be equally responsible for mine-laying and they base their contention on the fact that few, if any, military vehicles have been blown up.

Russian Reaction Is Watched To Wallace Speech Discord

Paris, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—The American delegation to the Paris Peace Conference was reported to be watching tonight for any signs that the Russians intend to use the controversy over Commerce Secretary Henry A. Wallace's speech as a lever to stiffen their attitude on conference problems.

Neutral observers speculated that any such move by the Russians might force Secretary of State James F. Byrnes to stiffen his own "get tough with Russia" policy to insure that the world and specifically the delegations here are aware that his position has not been altered.

If that occurs, these observers agree it may result in a further prolongation of the conference, which faces discussion this week on two of its most difficult problems—Trieste and the Greek-Bulgarian frontier dispute.

The American deligation was reported satisfied with President Truman's statement, which Byrnes' senatorial advisers virtually demanded and which observers feel was all they could expect.

But members of the delegation also are aware that virtually nothing the President did or said could repair the damage of his earlier indorsement of a foreign policy speech by another Cabinet member which in many respects contradicted Byrnes' policies.

The Americans hope the incident will be forgotten. Some officials most familiar with Soviet reactions point out that the Soviets are realists. They insist that even though the Russians try to use the incident in attempts to embarrass the United States, it is action rather than words which count with them in the end.

China Still Needs U. S. Troops, State Dept. Advises Critics

By International News Service

The State Department declared yesterday that United States armed forces are still needed in China to assist in establishing a "strong and united nation."

In a letter to the National Committee to Win the Peace, Francis H. Russell, chief of the State Department's Division of Public Liaison, reaffirmed the American policy of withdrawing troops from China as soon as conditions have been stabilized.

The committee, in a letter to President Truman, had demanded the immediate withdrawal of the troops.

Referring to previous policy statement on China by President Truman and Undersecretary of State Acheson, Russell declared:

"In the conduct of our relations and in the implementation of our policy toward China, it is the primary purpose of this Government to assist in the restoration of peace and tranquillity in the establishment of a strong, united and democratic Chinese nation.

"The relatively small numbers of the United States armed forces remaining in China in the implementation of this policy and at the request of the Chinese government will be withdrawn just as soon as their mission is completed."

The Committee to Win the Peace assailed Russell's statement as a "whitewash of the Government's one-sided intervention of Chiang Kai-shek."

Col. Evans F. Carlson and Paul Robeson are cochairmen of the committee.

WALLACE

Dealer, and to prove it he stumped the Nation for the reelection of the President and a Democratic Congress.

He faces the same situation now, under different circumstances. But information tonight was that he again will take his spanking in good grace and go on with plans to campaign for the party ticket.

Speaks Again September 24

His next major speech is scheduled before a National Citizens Political Action Committee meeting in Providence, R. I., September 24. A week later, under auspices of the Democratic National Committee, he is scheduled to start a barnstorming tour that will take his New Deal Democratic credo into 11 States—Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, Iowa and Washington. In some States, particularly New York and Pennsylvania, he may speak more than once.

A question being asked here last night was whether the Democratic National Executive Committee, which meets here September 26, now will head off that tour. Wallace's itinerary is being arranged by Representative John J. Sparkman of Alabama, new director of the national committee's combined speakers' bureau.

The bureau is a part of the committee. Thus, if Wallace speaks under its aegis, it amounts to a committee indorsement of what the former Vice President says.

Cannot Decide Policy

In Bristol, Conn., Sparkman told the United Press that "Wallace is going through with his speaking engagements." He added that "I believe Mr. Wallace—as a private citizen—has a right to express an opinion as to what our foreign policy should be.

"But I don't think he is in any position to decide that policy. If the President and Secretary of State say it is one thing, then that's what it is as far as I'm concerned."

National Committee attaches would not comment last night and the White House remained silent.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross, asked if there was now a chance that Wallace would not represent Mr. Truman at the inauguration of Chilean President-elect Gonzales Videla in November, said he could not answer that until today. Wallace has been designated Mr. Truman's "personal ambassador."

Position Unenviable

On the foreign policy, Democrats and Republicans alike point out that Wallace is in an unenviable position. His speech reportedly infuriated Byrnes and Senators Connally (D., Tex.) and Vandenberg (R., Mich.), the three principal representatives to the Paris Peace Conference. In addition, the State Department made it clear that it had not been consulted about Wallace's address and that it definitely conflicted with Byrnes' now famous Stuttgart speech.

It apparently is up to Mr. Truman to bridge this gap and keep peace in his Cabinet and within his Administration.

Pearson Says Wallace Holds Policy Warlike

(Columnist Drew Pearson said last night in his weekly broadcast (Blue Network) that Wallace plans to call on the President today or Tuesday, reaffirm his now famous statements on Russia and Britain, and inform Mr. Truman that U. S. foreign policy is making war inevitable.

(Pearson went on to say that Wallace also will tell Mr. Truman that he can not remain a part "of any Administration that is dragging us into war." Pearson said further that the President approved Wallace's speech in advance, after reading it twice and after conceding that it might make "Jimmy"—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes—"sore." He said the President approved it nevertheless.)

CHINA

menaced at present, other National columns were moving on Kalgan from three directions and were pressing southward with the apparent aim of carving a north-south corridor between the two Communist strongholds. Approximately 300 miles remains to be traversed to accomplish this objective, however.

The progovernment paper Ta Kang Pao reported that Nationalist troops had reached Tatung, 150 miles northeast of Yangku and the same distance west of Peiping, but the situation there was confused. Other dispatches said this force had arrived only at the Great Wall, just north of Tatung.

The Communists have been besieging Tatung for many weeks, and the government threatened a fortnight ago to seize Kalgan if the siege continued. Since then government troops have claimed Fengchen, 25 miles north of Tatung, and were reported moving on southward toward the Communist-encircled city. The Communists, however, denied today that they had lost Fengchen and said they were preparing a counterattack on Tsining.

Government armies were threatening Kalgan from this position, 80 miles southwest, and from the areas of Tsining and Chengteh, similiar distances east and west.

Progovernment dispatches from the field said the Communists were removing vital supplies from Kalgan in evident fear that they might lose the city or at least find it isolated from the extensive Chahar border region which it normally controls.

There also was continued fighting in coastal Shantung province, where the government was endeavoring to clear the Communists off the railroad leading west from Tsingtao, and in Kiangsu province, just north of Shanghai and Nanking, where the government's central news agency said a national drive had reached within 15 miles of the Communist headquarters at Hualyin.

An American army officer newly returned to Peiping from an extensive trip through Communist and government areas in Manchuria told Associated Press Correspondent Tom Masterson that the civil war would be resumed in that once-rich territory "before snow flies."

Wang Ping-nan, Communist spokesman in Nanking, said that on the pacification question, the Communists still were insisting that Chiang Kai-shek issue an unconditional cease-fire order before they would talk politics.

General Marshall, special American envoy who has struggled for many months to bring the Chinese factions together, was still trying today, but with no word of progress.

Marshall flew again to Kuling, Chiang Kai-shek's summer capital, on an undisclosed mission. It might be his last trip there, for the generalissimo is expected to return to Nanking for the winter within a few days.

plained to them that it was impossible to release the men because they had been turned over to the Thirteenth Corps, which had ordered an inquiry. The Yugoslav captain and the four soldiers then left the military police headquarters, the dispatch said.

The men arrested, the dispatch said, were found with hand grenades during rioting in Trieste a week ago.

GIs Fired On in Trieste

Trieste, Sept. 15 (INS).—Several shots were fired tonight at U. S. military police and civil police investigating an explosion which partially destroyed a building used as a recreation center in the outskirts of Trieste. No casualties were reported to have been caused by the shots, which were believed to have been fired from a distance.

The Long Pull

There is a note of rugged realism in the latest plans of the Central Suffrage Conference. Some members and friends of that organization had hoped and believed that the achievement of unity among the local groups seeking the restoration of suffrage in the District would be followed by quick action by Congress. They were disappointed, but not disillusioned. Now there seems to be agreement that the fight for suffrage will be a long, hard struggle. A two-year campaign is being outlined, and we get the impression that the conference will be prepared for a much longer effort if necessary.

Good judgment is reflected also in the plans for appealing to the public for support. Perhaps too much effort in the past has been spent working directly with Congress. To be sure, the decision must ultimately be made by Congress, but it is now quite evident that Congress feels free to ignore the appeals of relatively small groups. To make the demand for suffrage effective it must have the power of an aroused public behind it. The demonstration planned by the Central Suffrage Conference for election day and the proposed rally early next year are apparently aimed at this objective.

We do not think the conference can do much along this line. All indications we have seen support the belief that an overwhelming majority of the people of Washington favor the restoration of suffrage, but we doubt that Congress is convinced of that fact. Suffrage is not likely to be voted until passive interest in it is converted into clamorous demands. Once the city is really aroused over the continued denial of this basic privilege of citizenship, we suspect that the resistance in Congress can be overcome in spite of the lack of our direct political power.

Bumper Crop

In a world still hungry from the depletion caused by war, bumper food crop prospects seem an answer to prayer. Thus the Department of Agriculture's September 1 estimate of the largest wheat and corn harvests in United States history will be regarded universally as good news. Some 1,167,319,000 bushels of wheat are "practically harvested," and the outlook is for a corn crop of 3,371,000,000 bushels, a substantial increase both in size and quality over previous peaks. Other staple crops, too, will meet or exceed averages and are the fruition of near-gargantuan efforts by American farmers. Only in cotton, rye and oil-producing items are figures far below normal.

All this is highly encouraging. There have been years in which such bounty spelled disaster to producers; but now they are secure in the knowledge that every bit of food grown can be used. It is reasonable to expect that additional grain now will be available as livestock feed. This may help relieve the meat famine that is developing by encouraging use of feeder lots. There is some hope, too, that the supply of grain may bring at least some reduction in the current high domestic grain prices.

One result of the crop report doubtless will be a demand for complete relaxation of all Department of Agriculture controls on use of grain. On this a word of caution is in order. There is some justification for the hope that the corn crop will meet demands. With last year's carryover, we shall have a total corn crop in excess of 3,500,000,000 bushels as against last year's 3,300,000,000 bushels. Much of this, moreover, is hard corn, considered superior to the soft corn which made up a large portion of last year's crop. The wheat picture, however, is different. While this year's over-all crop is the largest in history, the total amount of wheat available is not. Ordinarily we have a large carryover in wheat. But this year emergency shipments of wheat abroad reduced the carryover to only 101 million bushels. Thus the total amount available this year, even with the carryover, will be only approximately 1,269,000,000 bushels—substantially below last year's 1,400,000,000 bushels. The same situation regarding the carryover also applies to the Canadian crop.

Thus, while the picture on corn is improved, actually the situation on wheat is illusory. Nor can the potential demand on our wheat resources be said to be down to anywhere near normal. The prospect is that there will be need for all the wheat we can grow for sometime to come. Despite better crops in Europe, for instance, over-all production is far below prewar years. Britain, which had been expecting a large grain harvest, has had its hopes shattered by destructive rains. Near-famine conditions continue in India and China. And although UNRRA will end officially next winter, the need for food obviously will continue. We will be called upon to export large quantities of food well into 1947 and perhaps long beyond that.

Possibly later, when the corn crop actually materializes and there are adequate estimates on grain crops in the Southern Hemisphere, some further relaxation on grain controls here will be justified. But any action of this sort should be taken on the basis of an over-all assay of conditions. Our bumper crop seems as if it were a tonic provided by nature to soothe the wounds of war, but prudence should still be the watchword.

Amends To Mr. Byrnes

President Truman will find it impossible to undo all the damage that has been done to our foreign policy by his careless indorsement and later repudiation of Secretary Wallace's speech. No word or action of his can fully eliminate the impression of a schism in the United States Government on the most vital issues of foreign policy. But the President can further mitigate the effects of the blunder which he permitted Mr. Wallace to commit in the name of the Administration, and we think he should lose no time in doing so.

The President's statement to a hastily called press conference on Saturday is a beginning of the necessary corrective process. But it is only a beginning. The President merely repudiated Mr. Wallace's speech in New York as an expression of Administration policy and said that there will be no change in our foreign policy without discussion and conference among the President, the Secretary of State and congressional leaders. What he failed to do was to put Secretary of Commerce Wallace in his place. In other words, Mr. Wallace must consider himself rebuked for entrenching upon the province of the Secretary of State and ruthlessly mangling our foreign policy, but he is left free to repeat the offense at any time.

The next step for the President to take, in our opinion, is to make certain that Mr. Wallace will not again muddy the waters of our foreign policy by presuming to speak for the Administration on matters that are outside of his official sphere of action. Any Cabinet member ought to have enough respect for his fellow officials to abide by this rule without prompting from the White House. But since Mr. Wallace does not, he will have to be restrained to avoid involvement of the State Department in an intolerable situation.

Beyond this, we think the President ought to make an affirmative declaration of his support of the Byrnes policy. No mere transfer of his indorsement from the Wallace "two-worlds" thesis to the Byrnes "one-world" thesis will set the record straight. Until there is some clear-cut and positive statement of American foreign policy from the White House, statesmen at the Peace Conference and elsewhere will be inclined to question whether Secretary Byrnes is speaking with the solid backing of the American Government. The result would inevitably be a tragic weakening of our sane and constructive policy at a critical moment in the reconstruction period.

Only a positive spelling out of the President's confidence in Secretary Byrnes and of White House support for what the Secretary is trying to do in Europe can effectively minimize the loss of prestige that American policy has suffered abroad. Nor will anything less, for that matter, smooth the way for continuation of the bipartisan approach to foreign policy within our own borders. The President expects the Nation to be united behind him in dealing with the momentous problems of the postwar world. The Nation, in turn, expects the Administration to be united in that undertaking. It cannot fail in this respect without tragically weakening the hope for world peace.

Finally, of course, better management of official affairs at the White House is called for. We cannot imagine this blunder occurring if the President had been carefully and thoughtfully advised as to the implications of the speech to which he gave his cursory blessing. Apparently no one at the White House who was consulted on the matter foresaw the explosive characteristics of Mr. Wallace's attempt to undercut the State Department. If that is true, the President cannot afford to leave himself exposed to such palpable errors of judgment.

Tax Hearings

The Board of Commissioners is wrestling with the District's tax problem in a manner that is both practical and democratic. Its first step was to appoint a special tax committee so as to give expert guidance to subsequent discussion of new sources of revenue. That committee brought in eight tax proposals estimated to yield an aggregate of nearly 20 million dollars. Today citizen groups will begin picking over these proposals at public hearings. Spokesmen for at least 30 organizations are expected to appear. Undoubtedly a cross-section of public opinion will be expressed. The Commissioners will then have the task of formulating and submitting to Congress a tax program that will meet the community's needs in the light of community opinion.

It is scarcely necessary to remind the Commissioners that any new local taxes should be accompanied by a substantial increase in the Federal payment to the District. Almost every agency which has studied this problem, including the Senate Appropriations Committee and the House subcommittee handling the District budget, has concluded that the Federal Government is not paying a fair share of the expense of governing and servicing the Nation's Capital. While they are proposing new taxes the Commissioners are thus under the strongest possible obligation to fight for an equitable division of this expense to be automatically determined each year by a formula such as that proposed by Senator O'Mahoney. No such adjustment will by itself meet the District's fiscal requirements. Additional taxes must be levied too. But the proposal of new taxes to fill part of the gap between prospective outgo and income will give the Commissioners a strong lever that can be pulled in favor of a fair Federal-District fiscal arrangement.

Political Pandering

Senator Mead of New York is one of the two Senators who voted just the way the CIO desired on 12 so-called key measures that came before the Seventy-ninth Congress. He has been well rewarded for hewing so faithfully to the CIO legislative line. For the American Labor Party and the CIO's Political Action Committee are supporting his candidacy for the governorship of New York State on the Democratic ticket.

Having earned labor's indorsement by opposing legislative measures designed to impose a check on certain antisocial activities of organized labor, Senator Mead chalked up some more good marks by a speech delivered last week before the State convention of the CIO. When he spoke the maritime strike was in full swing and shipping activities at a standstill in ports throughout the Nation. New York City was also in the throes of a trucking strike that was rapidly paralyzing local trade and industry. Yet Senator Mead chose this singularly inauspicious moment to extol the contributions organized labor had made to victory by its wartime no-strike record. Apart from the fact that the wartime strike record was nothing to boast about, the Senator's emphasis on labor's past performance and his laudation of the defective Wagner Act, whose shortcomings have been highlighted by current labor disturbances, can only be regarded as the grossest kind of pandering for labor votes.

Any true friend of labor ought to have had the nerve to point out that the establishment of strong enduring labor organizations is being jeopardized by the present hold-up tactics of powerful unions. When union labor resorts to terroristic tactics to extort concessions from private employers and force even the Government to bow to its dictates, the public becomes alarmed. With reason it begins to fear that the end-result of irresponsible union leadership may be a form of political dictatorship by labor no less repugnant to believers in free institutions than the dictatorships of any other organized class or group within the body politic.

Senator Mead's assertion that labor must be "given the right to deal with management as an equal" and should "not be treated as a chattel of capital and management" will be indorsed by all liberal-minded Americans. At the moment, however, the country is more concerned about the unions that are able to enforce their demands without recourse to genuine collective bargaining. Far from being chattels of management, many unions have demonstrated a terrifying ability to become oppressors both of management and of the public at large. For in the end it is the public that has to pay for strikes and carry the economic burdens of excessive wage demands.

Senator Mead has displayed qualities of real statesmanship as chairman of the special committee investigating wartime contracts. We only wish that the courage and zeal he has shown in his role of investigator had been in evidence when he addressed the CIO convention.

Coal Parleys

Negotiations between the bituminous mine operators and John L. Lewis' union, started last week at the Government's request, have been prorogued and will not be resumed until the entire union membership has passed upon questions of policy at its October convention. This news comes as a reminder that the industry has been operating under Government control ever since the mines were seized last May to put an end to the miners' "vacation" that was fast producing industrial paralysis even more menacing than the present maritime strikes. Reports indicate that a settlement with the private owners has not been facilitated in the least by Government seizure, for the Southern operators are still standing out against the royalty payment for welfare purposes, while questions relating to the unionization of supervisory employes also continue to be a moot issue.

As long as the Government remains in control of the mines Mr. Lewis is assured of a Nation-wide contract for his union. The union will also continue to receive abundant revenue from the royalty tax imposed to meet the costs of the miners' welfare and retirement program, set up under the contract negotiated between the Government and the union. Mr. Lewis would not be so foolish as to risk forfeiture of these gains by showing any eagerness to resume negotiations with the mine owners. Indeed, we suspect that he is well satisfied with the status quo, as is indicated by the unwonted mildness of his words and manner.

Moreover, by playing a waiting game he will undoubtedly soften operator opposition to his demands. For the longer the Government retains control of the mines, the greater becomes the danger of their ultimate nationalization. That might suit Mr. Lewis and some of the other labor leaders who have been urging Government seizure of struck plants as a solution of labor disputes. But it would not suit a people whose industry is based on an economy of free enterprise. Nor would it provide a solution of our labor troubles to encourage the Government to take over plants and settle labor disputes by the simple expedient of granting whatever labor demands.

Baltic Plight

In a dispatch from Lake Success, Mr. F. H. LaGuardia among other things is quoted as saying that the former homes of the displaced persons from the Baltic states now are "under Soviet jurisdiction." In other words Mr. LaGuardia considers the Baltic states to be legally governed by the USSR.

However, domination of the Baltic states obtained in result of aggression does not create a basis for jurisdiction. Mr. James F. Byrnes on June 12, 1946, in a certificate issued by the Department of State under No. 4065 states: "I certify that the absorption of Estonia by the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics is not recognized by the Government of the United States." And under No. 4066: "I certify that the regime now functioning in Estonia is not recognized by the Government of the United States." This attitude is also valid with respect to Latvia and Lithuania, similarly held under illegal Soviet domination.

Thus, to let Soviet Russian representatives enter Baltic displaced person camps to "persuade" the Balts to return home—at least in the American zone—would be in contradiction with the policy of nonrecognition of the United States. How can one "persuade" the Balts to accept Soviet Russian jurisdiction, which is actually a terrorist Bolshevik dictatorship? At the same time one cannot blame the Balts that they are of "one state of mind" in their opposition to the Bolshevik dictatorship imposed on their countries by force of arms.

We know that Mr. LaGuardia also visited a Baltic camp in Germany and was duly informed about the "experiences" the displaced persons had to endure from the Bolsheviks. After all that Mr. LaGuardia still speaks about a "jurisdiction" in the Baltic states. If this is not a conundrum—then I don't know any better. There is not "jurisdiction" but "jurismalediction" in the Baltic states moaning under continuous terror and hoping that the lofty promises of the Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms were not idle words.

Also the Baltic people don't like to live in a poorhouse under the Bolshevik dictators without any prospects of achieving a decent standard. That is why they refuse to return now—but they would gladly all go, even on foot, if the Bolsheviks would leave their countries alone and first go themselves home to their own country, Russia.

Mr. Byrnes' Speech

I saw a picture in The Post of September 7 of a secret cemetery for the victims of a Nazi concentration camp at Zeithein. This is only one of the many which have appeared in the daily press from time to time.

And then, reading Secretary Byrnes' speech recommending an early establishment for a provisional German government, it was frightening.

In the past 30 years, Germany has been the cause of millions of deaths. It has shed enough blood to float the Navy. Millions of homes have been wrecked. Millions of orphans were left in this world without ever having known a parent. Mental institutions have been filled. How can we forget so soon?

Why not open the doors of our jails and mental institutions? Why not turn out and let roam all gangsters and murderers and thieves? What harm can they do compared with the millions of the most notorious murderers—the Germans in Germany today?

Are we more concerned about the people who built the "land of tomorrow" than we are about its victims? Think of the Jews who have wandered—and are still wandering, God knows where, through no fault of their own! Who is concerned about them? What harm have they done to the world? And yet "poor Germany" which has been the cause of untold suffering is to be restored. If it were not so tragic it might be called a big joke.

Why not turn Germany over to the people of the world who were made to bleed and suffer and know living death—and make a melting pot of that country? It is to these people that Germany belongs. Not to the decadent used-to-be master race. Or shall they still be the "master race?" According to Mr. Byrnes' speech, the answer is yes.

Our Right In The Peace

Mildred Cole (letter published September 12) wonders what would be said in the United States if Stalin sent airplanes to write his initials in the air over Mexico.

If twice in a quarter-century Stalin had sent millions of soldiers and billions in supplies to aid us in overcoming a neighboring enemy, he would never stop at writing his initials in the sky. He would take over the place. Having "liberated" his erstwhile enemy, little Romania, he is now busy stamping his initials on every aspect of Romanian life, and that unfortunate country is but one of the European countries initialed by Stalin for his own.

When we fight in European wars we have the right to insist on settlements acceptable to us in the postwar period, to give our people reasonable assurance we will not be called upon to bury thousands more young Americans on European battlefields. There are no Russian expeditionary forces buried in this hemisphere, and Stalin does not have the stake in this part of the world that American blood gives us in "his" Europe.

Secretary Wallace's Speech

There appears to be a fundamental contradiction between two passages of Secretary Wallace's speech in Madison Square Garden. In one passage he states: "In brief, as I see it today, the World Order is bankrupt—and the United States, Russia and England are the receivers. These are the hard facts of power politics on which we have to build a functioning, powerful United Nations and a body of international law. And as we build, we must develop fully the doctrine of the rights of small peoples as contained in the United Nations Charter. This law should ideally apply as much to Indonesians and Greeks as to Bulgarians and Poles—but practically, the application may be delayed until both British and Russians discover the futility of their methods."

But, notwithstanding "the rights of small peoples," Mr. Wallace makes, in another passage, the following statement: "On our part, we should recognize that we have no more business in the political affairs of Eastern Europe than Russia has in the political affairs of Latin America, Western Europe and the United States."

One is entitled to doubt that the last statement, which contradicts the first, can be helpful in making the Russians "discover the futility of their methods." Besides, has President Roosevelt's good neighbor policy (praised in the same speech by Secretary Wallace) ever resulted in the imposition, on Latin-American countries, of pro-American political regimes backed by American troops?

All Eastern European nations ardently desire a close and friendly relationship with Russia. Most of them needed a democratic revolution. But none of them will give up its national independence.

Aside from the fact that political and economic "affairs" cannot be separated, the statement of the Secretary of Commerce constitutes a condonation of foreign domination in Eastern Europe, for an indefinite period; it is an outright repudiation of the Yalta, Potsdam and Moscow agreements, entered into by the Presidents of the United States and their Secretary of State, and of President Truman's categorical stand against "spheres of influence," as stated in his radio address of August 9, 1945, and his subsequent Navy Day speech; it is a repudiation of the stand taken by Secretary Byrnes and all the American delegates to the Peace Conference.

The apparent purpose of Mr. Wallace's address was to counteract the growing war psychosis. Unfortunately by condoning a power political division of the world, he fosters just what he tries to avert.

Every sane person agrees that thinking in terms of war as the only way to settle the East-West conflict is sheer madness. But creating confusion as to the real causes of the prevailing tension amounts actually to making peaceful agreements impossible. Speeches like Secretary Wallace's, in their disregard of the signed pledges and the principles of the United Nations Charter, constitute an encouragement of power politics. And power politics inevitably lead to war.

I cannot believe, as has been said in various newspapers, that the real purpose of the speech may have been to secure the so-called leftist vote in the forthcoming election. For that vote has no other place to go than the Democratic ticket. A good many of the people who filled Madison Square Garden represent the various shades of socialism in the United States and there can be no question that the Republican Party is closer to capitalist orthodoxy than the Democratic Party, in spite of the latter's Southern representatives.

The real purpose of the speech may have been to parry the recent Soviet thrusts, which were aimed mainly at capitalistic America. But, with England's and France's political and economic evolution, a Russian-American controversy has become inevitable. The capitalistic United States has become the opposite pole to the communistic Soviet Union. What really matters is the trust of the world that the United States will not swerve from its creed in free consent of the people everywhere. Lincoln's "half-free-half-slave" proposition has never been more pertinent than at this crucial time: the immediate future of all nations, without any exception, is at stake.

The fact that most countries of Eurasia (more than three quarters of the world) have either adopted socialism, or are in the process of doing so, has not shaken their faith in the capitalistic United States. For that faith is not based on the approval of American capitalism, in spite of its unique achievements, but on the American ideal of freedom and human dignity.

The Villainous Angel

A SEASON IN HELL (Une Saison en Enfer), by Arthur Rimbaud; translated by Louise Varese. (New Directions, $1.)

THE ILLUMINATIONS OF RIMBAUD; translated by Louise Varese. (New Directions, $1.50.)

RIMBAUD, by Wallace Fowlie. (New Directions, $2.50.)

Together these thin and rather fragile volumes should afford the American reader an intelligent and sympathetic understanding of the young madman who, as Mr. Fowlie says, experienced and expressed more vividly and truthfully than any other the spiritual vision of his age. I do not indeed wish to imply that the poetry of Jean Arthur Rimbaud is unknown here, but merely that its historical and literary importance and influence are not even yet very widely recognized. One reason of course has been the well-nigh impassable difficulties of translation, which exist in the case of any poet, but are multiplied in the case of such a poet as Rimbaud for whom the vowels had not only sound and appearance but also color and, I dare say, odor and taste. Mrs. Varese says that she began her translation of Une Saison en Enfer to find out for herself "whether I could juxtapose and set in motion similar English words charged with the same potential," and that she is still frightened by her own audacity. But her publisher, Mr. James Laughlin, is satisfied that she has succeeded in carrying over "to the second language much of the essence of the French text." Waiving the question whether the essence of anything is divisible, one may observe that Mrs. Varese has done everything possible within the limitations of the job; in any event the French originals are printed on left-hand pages opposite to her work, so that the reader may supply or surmise for himself whatever has escaped her powers.

I believe I have said more than once that I do not hold with the biographical school of literary criticism; that is to say with the theory that an author's work should be interpreted in terms of his personal life. But if I were arguing on the opposite side I should certainly choose the example of Rimbaud. Mr. Fowlie, whose critical premises seem to be an interesting and ingenious compound of psychoanalysis and mystical Catholicism, makes an impressive case for asserting that the key to "the modern period of literature, which begins with Rimbaud's poems and which ends perhaps with Finnegan's Wake," is to be sought in the psychology of childhood, and especially in the nature and content of infantile fantasy, as evinced in "the strange masterpieces of Rimbaud, Apollinaire, Rilke, Joyce, Picasso, Chagall, Stravinski and Satie." There is at any rate no doubt that the explanation of much of Rimbaud's extraordinary behavior must be sought in the tyrannical attitudes of his mother, that strong, proud, ruthless, provincial French woman, who forced his naturally precocious intellect, by forbidding him the society of other children, leaving him only the solaces of study and imagination.

The amazing adventures of Paul Verlaine and Rimbaud in Brussels and London were, says Mr. Fowlie, "the literal epic of our age, in which the myth of the modern artist is related. It is the same story, recast in literary form by James Joyce in the Dublin Odyssey of Leopold Bloom and Stephen Dedalus. . . . The man who bends to the century (Verlaine-Bloom) and the man who surpasses the century (Rimbaud-Stephen) are one hero who seeks tragically to know love by what is beyond love." There was the fantastic scene at Brussels, when the drunken Verlaine in the presence of his wife fired three shots at Rimbaud, wounding him in the wrist. Verlaine went to prison for 18 months, where, deeply contrite, he conceived and composed the profound and beautiful religious poems afterwards published under the title Sagesse. Yet immediately upon his release he rejoined Rimbaud, and "three hours later had denied his God" and started the 98 wounds of Our Lord bleeding again." But this time there was a permanent quarrel.

Behind all Rimbaud's diableries and debaucheries, Mr. Fowlie finds, was the quest of power, and "the use of power through the knowledge of sin, of intoxication, of poetry. The role of Satan in the vocation of every artist is prodigious, although often masked. . . . This was the Beaudelairean pose of the romantic hero. Verlaine himself could only marvel at this total knowledge of evil, because he was always . . . uncertain of his projects and his sentiments. Rimbaud, because he knew all and especially his desires, was as pitiless as Satan. Alcohol and physical love had become absolute for Verlaine; for Rimbaud they were means to some unarticulated demoniac pride. . . . Verlaine was the more typical poet of the nineteenth century, the man of velleities and changing complexion, who rediscovered a temporary equilibrium in the diminished bourgeoise faith of his century. But Rimbaud is the one example of the boy-prophet who abandoned everything: his mother, his God, his love, his poetry. He finally abandoned his mightiest sin: the desire to go too far in the order of creation."

Rimbaud, it seems, desired to be an angel; not perhaps an angel in the theological sense of the word, but "in the new sense created by the contemporary artist—a sense which is transforming the antedated hero of physical action into the new hero of spiritual action. The angel is that being who lives more with the invisible than with the visible. He is Rimbaud believing he is out of this world . . . In an angelic sense, to be is to know the eternity of God. For an angel time is not that mystery which destroys life. Rimbaud's angelic intuition made of his terrible present a season of infernal suicide."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Negro And The Franchise

IN GEORGIA, for the first time, the Negroes voted in really important numbers this year—80,000 seems the best estimate of the Negro vote. Elsewhere, they have voted in greater numbers than before. The result—and Southerners of every political stripe are agreed that one follows on the other—has been that in most States with an important Negro minority the movement to disenfranchise the Negro once and for all has been greatly strengthened. This movement exists not only in Talmadge's Georgia or Bilbo's Mississippi. It also exists in the liberal oasis, Alabama, where the racial issue was not raised in this year's political contest. That is the measure of the depth of feeling on the racial issue in the deep South.

Georgia and Mississippi, if the plans of the Bilbo and Talmadge political camps succeed, intend to imitate the example of South Carolina. The Supreme Court decision, which confirmed the right of Negro citizens to vote in the Democratic primaries, was based on the State laws of Texas. South Carolina has in effect bypassed the decision merely by repealing all its State laws dealing with the primary. The primary thus becomes a private affair, extra-legal—much as if every person with red hair or the name of Smith banded together to nominate a candidate—and in South Carolina the primary has been exclusively white. A move is on foot to test the constitutionality of this device before the Supreme Court, but in the meantime the Talmadgites and the Bilboites are for it.

IN ALABAMA another device has been proposed to accomplish the same end. It is called the Boswell amendment, and the citizens of Alabama will either approve or reject it this November. There is no doubt in anyone's mind as to its purpose; its sponsors have stated frankly that it is designed to keep the Negroes from voting. The vote would be restricted to those who can "understand and explain" the Constitution. As pointed out by Col. Richard Rives of Montgomery, one of the leaders of the liberal Hill-Sparkman camp in Alabama politics, Justice Felix Frankfurter would undoubtedly be obliged in all conscience to disenfranchise Justice Hugo Black under the terms of the amendment, and vice versa. The uses which an unscrupulous machine politician, of the stripe of Huey Long, could make of this kind of regulation not only against Negroes, but against whites of the opposite political camp, are all too obvious.

The amendment has the unanimous approval of the powerful Democratic Executive Committee, and at the moment the betting is that it will be approved. Yet the degree of opposition to the kind of "solution" of the racial issue offered by the Boswell amendment is often underestimated outside the South.

There is in fact a powerful party in almost every Southern State of those who believe sincerely that qualified Negroes should be given the vote. Sometimes this is a mere pious and public wish, but more often it is sincere. Yet all these are gradualists. They would slowly work the Negroes into the existing political system, in such a way that a block Negro vote, the nightmare of all white Southerners, should be avoided.

MORAL JUDGMENT to one side, it is important to realize that this is about the position on the racial issue held by the great majority of those men who are leading the fight against Bilboism in the South. It is politically important to the rest of the country, both that strong opposition to Bilboism exists, and that the leaders of this opposition are all gradualists. For nothing can be more obvious than that, whether Northern idealists like it or not, Bilboism will be beaten, if it is beaten at all, by Southerners.

Such men believe, rightly or wrongly, that if the South is given time it will eventually reach a point where the Negroes can achieve political and economic equality with the whites. But it is unrealistic to blink the fact that social segregation is still a firmly rooted part of the whole Southern cultural pattern. Even Southern CIO leaders will tell you that it will be generations before Jim Crow is eliminated. It may surprise many Northerners to find that in the CIO itself a mild form of Jim Crow is practiced. There is complete voting and economic equality between whites and Negroes in a union, but at a meeting the whites will sit on one side of the hall, and the Negroes on the other. If a union social function is scheduled, there is one for the whites and one for the Negroes, and they take place under separate roofs.

The CIO in fact practices what the Southern gradualists preach: Political and economic equality, and social segregation. That such a compromise is unsatisfactory in a democracy goes without saying, but it is fatuous to imagine that more can be achieved in the measurable future, and any Southerner, CIO leaders included, will tell you that even this will not happen overnight. It will take a long, long time.

Checking The Damage

By Ernest Lindley

Mr. Truman's Double Blunder

THE PRESIDENT'S statement of Saturday was about the best he, or anyone else, could do under the circumstances. The key sentence is, of course, "There has been no change in the established foreign policy of our Government."

Lindley

For the last seven months—since difficulties growing out of the Moscow conference were ironed out—the President and Secretary Byrnes have worked in close and cordial cooperation. Mr. Byrnes has made no major moves without consulting the President. During the current Paris conference, as during his previous journeys abroad since the first of the year, he has telephoned the White House frequently.

The President has not only been kept thoroughly informed. He has taken an active hand in the direction of foreign policy. He went over Secretary Byrnes' Stuttgart speech line by line before it was delivered and suggested a few changes, which were incorporated.

THE PRESIDENT also attaches the greatest importance to preserving the bipartisan front on major questions of foreign policy. He has demonstrated that in many ways, including the appointment of Senator Warren R. Austin as U. S. delegate to the U. N. Security Council. He would not consciously do anything to jeopardize or weaken the bipartisan front or to disturb the excellent relations which Secretary Byrnes has restored with the Senate in recent months.

The President simply did not catch the full significance of certain paragraphs of the Wallace speech when the Secretary of Commerce went over it with him. He specifically commended a noncontroversial sentence. He was pleased also with Wallace's strong indorsement of Mead and Lehman. For the rest he apparently got a hazy idea that the speech was generally in favor of cooperation and understanding among the great powers. His mind must have been preoccupied—he was interrupted two or three times while the Secretary of Commerce was with him last Tuesday. He knew that Wallace was not in complete accord with him on foreign policy. But, if he had scented real trouble, he surely would have gone over the speech carefully—as he had done the Stuttgart speech only a few days earlier—and asked Wallace to change it. The deletion of a few sentences and alteration of a few others would have made the address harmless.

WALLACE was in the clear. He had taken the address to the White House and obtained the President's "okay." Most Cabinet members don't bother to do that. Most of them, of course, don't talk about controversial subjects outside their own spheres of responsibility. Wallace has been scrupulous about submitting his major speeches to the White House. The President, in turn, has been in the habit of giving Wallace plenty of rope. Wallace is the Administration's most influential member among the left-wingers, and the only survivor of the Roosevelt Cabinet. He has "played ball" with Truman even when he did not completely agree with him. There is also the circumstance that the President defeated Wallace for the vice presidential nomination. The President has been appreciative of Wallace's cooperation. For all these reasons, he handles Wallace even more delicately than he does most other members of his official family.

The President had no one except himself to blame for his double-boner — first, giving Wallace the "go-ahead" signal, and, then, saying at his press conference that he had approved the whole speech. The second mistake was worse than the first. The President's statement clears it up as well as it could be cleared up. It should not only check, but repair, much of the damage done abroad. He cannot wipe out the fact that he bungled. The Republicans will have a lot to say about that during the campaign. But perhaps the voters will forgive even the President for letting his mind wander during the reading of a political speech.

Morgenthau New Head Of Roosevelt Foundation

New York, Sept. 15 (INS).—Former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was named president today of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation, Inc. He succeeds George E. Allen who resigned because of his appointment as a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Former Postmaster General Frank C. Walker was elected chairman of a newly formed finance committee and David K. Niles, one of Mr. Roosevelt's executive assistants, was elected to the board of directors to replace the late Harry Hopkins.

Whose Move Is Next?

By Mark Sullivan

After The Wallace Speech

THIS REPORTER was at the White House press conference last week at which President Truman precipitated a great commotion. Exact understanding of what took place there is essential to allotment of responsibility as between Mr. Truman and the other party to the commotion, Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace.

Sullivan

Mr. Wallace was to deliver a speech that night. An advance copy of it was in the hands of a newsman. The newsman, addressing the President, began a question about the speech. Sharply the President interrupted; he said he could not answer a question about a speech that had not yet been delivered.

But the newsman put up an argument. He said that the speech "mentions you, Mr. President; that is why I am asking the question." That gave rise to laughter. Possibly under inspiration of the laughter, Mr. Truman told the newsman to go ahead with his question.

Thereupon the newsman read a sentence from the advance copy of Mr. Wallace's speech. It was a bombshell, the first. For Mr. Wallace had written into his speech this extraordinary sentence: "When President Truman read these words he said that they represented the policy of the Administration."

The newsman read that passage from Mr. Wallace's speech and then asked the President if his indorsement applied to the whole speech. Mr. Truman replied with a manner of some nettlement and defiance. He said that his indorsement applied to the whole of the Wallace speech, that he had read it all.

That was the second bombshell, an atomic one, with radium aftereffects penetrating into every cranny of the world. For Mr. Wallace's speech, when delivered that night, turned out to set forth a new policy for the United States toward Russia.

GO BACK NOW to the beginning. The United States was engaged in relations with Russia of the utmost seriousness. We were establishing a new policy toward that government, a policy of greater firmness. That policy had been officially declared by us, in an address by our Secretary of State, Mr. Byrnes, delivered with calculated impressiveness at the point of our main conflict with Russia, in Germany. A step in the new policy had been taken by sending a fleet to another point of conflict, Greece and the eastern Mediterranean.

In this situation a different member of the Cabinet, the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Wallace, writes a speech about our Russian relations. He does not show his speech to the Secretary of State—Mr. Byrnes had no chance to read it until after Mr. Wallace delivered it.

Mr. Wallace did show his speech to President Truman, and by that got an advantage. He enabled himself to write into his speech the fact that he had shown it, thus making his own words the words of the President. He enabled himself to say—at least he did say—that his speech "represented the policy of the Administration."

ENOUGH OF THAT. Beneath all is a basic condition, explaining more than any other aspect of what happened. This is, the status of Mr. Henry A. Wallace. When Mr. Wallace goes to President Truman with a speech setting forth a foreign policy, he does not go as a Cabinet member to a President. If that were his role, he would not go at all, nor write such a speech at all, for foreign relations is out of his jurisdiction.

No, the role in which Mr. Wallace went to Mr. Truman was that of a political leader, head of a school of thought which seeks its objectives through the Democratic Party, and which Mr. Truman, as head of his party, is under obligation to take into account. It was to this group that Mr. Wallace's speech was to be made, a rally promoted by groups pursuing Mr. Wallace's philosophy within the Democratic Party, announced by them as the opening of "the current congressional campaign." By implication Mr. Wallace, when he went to Mr. Truman, was telling him that he wished his (Wallace's) Russian policy to be the policy of the Administration.

The incident has effects: It humiliates President Truman, intolerably. It embarrasses Secretary of State Byrnes—in every controversy in which Russia's representatives oppose ours. Mr. Byrnes' hands are weakened. It enables the Russian government to feel and say that American policy about Russia is divided. It can be used by the Russian government to get submission by small countries which, if they thought we were unitedly and firmly against Russia, would side with us.

In the light of these effects, what happens now? Does Mr. Wallace resign? Is it thinkable that he should assume his relations with President Truman can go on as before? Lacking resignation by Mr. Wallace, what does Mr. Truman do?

Clark Will Ask New Congress For Strong Laws to Fight Mobs

By the United Press

U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark will ask the new Congress for a powerful set of laws to replace the present "thin thread," under which the Federal Government is seeking to combat the evils of mob brutality, it was revealed last night.

Already, he and his lieutenants in the Justice Department are whipping up public sentiment in favor of laws which will give them firm power to make the Bill of Rights what they call "a reality instead of a group of idealistic words in the Constitution."

Lynchings, the blinding and maiming of the helpless, particularly members of minority groups, in all parts of the country, have led to demands for sterner Federal action. But Clark and his department have not been able to do much because their jurisdiction is restricted.

Knowing that Federal prosecution was not possible in some of the more violent cases, Clark nevertheless has sent in the crack agents of the FBI to run down those responsible, with the aim of turning over what evidence was found to State authorities who do have the power to prosecute.

This policy has been followed in such instances as the mass lynching of four Negroes, including two women, at Monroe, Ga., in July.

The hunt for the 20 or so white men who made up the mob which shot down the Negroes is still on.

Hope for Negotiated Peace Wanes in N. Y. Truck Strike

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Operator-union negotiations in New York City's two-week strike of 15,000 truckers today brought the dispute no closer to settlement, and an operator spokesman said "there seems to be little hope for a negotiated settlement."

Mayor William O'Dwyer said that his six-man advisory committee was unable to bring about successful conclusion of its talks with union-management representatives.

Joseph M. Adellizi, operator spokesman, said employers stood by their proposal to refer the wage dispute to arbitration and added in a statement:

"We will take the men back to work, paying them retroactively in conformity with arbitration, or they may stay on the streets if they so choose."

The mayor's committee disclosed, however, it had met with representatives of a large trucking firm and a large distributing concern, whose separate proposals for a settlement union representatives agreed to recommend to their members.

Adellizi had said last night that the union had made "less severe" demands which had brought fresh hope for a settlement.

Meanwhile, two large food chains with 770 stores closed down last night. The A. & P., with 500 stores and 8000 employes, and Safeway, with 270 outlets and 5500 employes, announced they could not continue to operate in the absence of deliveries.

BUDGET

bined annual salaries will total $87,790.

The estimates also include a request for $87,878 for annual salaries of 26 men still in military service who are expected to return to the force during the fiscal year of 1948.

The department is asking for $23,600 to purchase two additional rescue squad cars, one floodlight wagon, three passenger cars and two utility trucks, and $152,700 to replace the following equipment, considered worn-out and obsolete: one pumping engine, two hose wagons, two aerial trucks, two rescue squad wagons and four chief's cars.

Additional increased operating expenses are requested to provide for within-grade salary promotions and pay increases as granted by public law and to meet the higher cost of maintaining present buildings and equipment.

In submitting its budget estimates to the District Commissioners, the Fire Department reported that it had responded to 9,117 alarms, encountered 5,451 actual fires and made 110,993 fire-prevention inspections during the year.

Low Per Capita Loss

Fire loss damage was kept down to $1,983,470, with a resultant low per capita loss of $2.10, the report stated.

Police Department budget estimates call for a division of the Anacostia-Benning section, now covered by the Eleventh Precinct, into two precincts with a new station house to be constructed at 42d st. and Benning rd. ne.

The department asks for an additional $310,242 to provide for annual salaries for 111 privates, including 16 mounted on motorcycles, who are to be added to the force.

That sum also includes salary increases for 10 additional men to be promoted to precinct detectives, 20 to be promoted to probationary detectives and 4 to be promoted to technicians on duty at the radio station.

Wants Force of 2500

In presenting its report to the District Commissioners, the department justified its need for an additional 111 men on the force as the initial step in its program to reach a force of 2500 men, considered necessary to protect Washington's approximate population of one million. During the current year the force has been greatly undermanned with provision for only 1739 uniformed members, the report declared.

The Police Department is also asking for the promotion of the sergeant now in charge of purchasing and accounts to the rank of lieutenant at an annual salary increase of $406 and the promotion of the private in charge of the property office to the rank of sergeant with an annual salary increase of $474.

A request is made for 26 new civilian clerks, including three fingerprint analysts, to be paid a total of $56,795 in annual salaries. The addition of these clerks will release seven policemen for other duties, according to the report.

The estimates also include a request for $41,625 to replace 25 light cruisers, 25 motorcycles, 2 patrol wagons and 1 towing crane, and $12,200 for the replacement of two wooden patrol boats and a modern diesel engine for Harbor Police.

CRASH

American, Maj. Jack Bleasdale of the 64th Bomb Squadron, who developed the famous "skip bombing" method of attack on surface vessels. Bleasdale was killed in the New Guinea fighting in 1942.

It was the 49th Group under Wurtsmith that gave America its first great air victory in the Pacific on July 30, 1942.

In that battle the Nips came over Darwin in force with 50 fighters and bombers.

Thirteen Jap fighters and seven bombers were definitely destroyed.

The American loss was one P-40, from which the pilot was rescued.

At that time American airmen in the Pacific were a part of the Allied Air Forces—a combination of Australian, American, Dutch and other Allied groups.

Upon the organization of the Fifth Air Force by Gen. George C. Kenney late in 1942, Wurtsmith was promoted to brigadier general, in command of the Fifth Fighter Command. From that he passed on to major general in command of the Thirteenth Air Force, that led in the later fighting in the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, and the approaches to Japan.

Twenty-One Fliers Die in Crash

Estevan, Sask., Sept 15 (AP).—Twenty-one members of the Royal Canadian Air Force were killed today when a Dakota transport crashed, exploded and burned while attempting to land at a military airport here.

Although RCAF officials declined to divulge any details of the crash, an eyewitness said he saw the plane approach the field with landing gear down. Then, he said, the pilot retracted the undercarriage, took the plane up again to a height of about 100 feet, from where it nose-dived and crashed.

The plane was bringing in a load of pilots assigned to fly a number of lend-lease Cornell Aircraft to Fargo, N. Dak., tomorrow.

The crash was the second worst in Canadian history.

local committees also were delegated to decide on which ships security watches must be maintained.

Livingston, as negotiations broke off, said that the issues being discussed here in the maritime dispute were "symptoms of the root" existing on the West Coast. He announced early in the meeting that discussions showed no progress could be made in negotiations until West Coast negotiations got under way.

NMU negotiators have refused to consider a strike settlement until the West Coast operators consent to negotiate.

AMERICA'S Foremost CHRISTIAN Biographer SCORES AGAIN!
Richard Ellsworth Day . . .
whose keenly analytical mind so masterfully sketched the lives of Finney, Spurgeon, and Moody . . . has given us another revealing pen portrait of a powerful personality.
Breakfast Table Autocrat
The life story of Henry Parsons Crowell, "the man who changed the breakfast habits of the world." Two hundred thousand books by Dr. Day have already reached the bookshelves of the world. In this latest work he has, in the words of a reviewer, "nailed the chair of supremacy fast." Every Christian in America should read this biography of a great millionaire industrial leader whose life demonstrated both business sagacity and Christian character of the highest type. How can a man be a business success without sacrificing Christian ethics? What makes a man a real leader? What is the effect of personal success on a true Christian? These are some of the important questions answered in the pages of Breakfast Table Autocrat. It's a book you'll want to buy and keep and recommend. 320 pages; 53 pages of photographs; cloth cover. $3.00 at all booksellers.

Petain's Wife Will Join Him On Exile Isle

Ile D'Yeu, France, Sept. 15 (INS)—The wife of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain has chosen limited exile on grim Ile D'Yeu in the fight for her husband's exoneration.

Mme. Eugenie Petain is still convinced that justice miscarried when the former Vichy chief of state was banished to the island off Brittany for collaboration with the Nazis.

Her only concern now is to have her 90-year-old husband cleared of the charges and released from the Ile D'Yeu prison.

Optimistically, she declared today in an interview:

"As soon as France has a real government, we shall ask for a revision of the trial verdict based on new documents discovered at the Nuernberg war crimes trial."

Petain was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

A daily visitor to his cell, Mme. Petain reported the marshal is well physically and his morale now "is as good as can be, but the treatment is horrible for him." She sees him between the hours of 3:30 and 4:30 p. m. She said "there are always two guards at his side" during the hour-long visits.

"He is lonely behind those walls. Despite the fact that he is on the island, he has never been permitted to look at the sea," she said.

Unheralded U. S. Migration To Continue, Census Shows

By the United Press

The American people, including the 27 million who left home during the war, are definitely not going to stay put in the years to come, according to the United States Census Bureau.

"Conditions indicate the development of a large nomadic population for some time to come," the bureau said last night.

The "vast human upheaval" caused when the Nazis uprooted and moved 10 million persons in Europe is dwarfed, according to the bureau, by a shift which has been taking place, "unheralded and with relative ease," within the borders of the United States.

Greatest in History

In three years of migration, one fifth of the country's total population moved away from home—a combined exodus of military personnel and civilians amounting to more than 27 million persons.

This led Census Director J. C. Capt to remark that "never before in the history of our country has there been so great a shuffling and redistribution of our population in so short a time."

From Pearl Harbor day to March, 1945, Uncle Sam called 12 million men and women for military service in the United States and other lands, the bureau reports. In the same period 15 million civilians left their homes, more or less by choice, and poured over State and county borders.

The bureau was quick to add that the war was not wholly responsible for the migratory trend. Before the war people moved from their home States at the rate of 1,300,000 annually. The war doubled this rate.

The postwar desire to be on the move "will continue high," Census experts said, because "the forces which set over a million people in motion each year are still in operation."

Upholds Long Tradition

The bureau said that "Americans have a long tradition of mobility, beginning with the immigrants who sailed here from distant points in search of freedom and new opportunities.

The South is a "high fertility area" where more children are born than can be absorbed by the industrial potential.

The North, on the contrary, is a "low fertility area" and for many years has attracted an increasing number of surplus workers from the South.

In addition, many industries are drifting to the West, pulling a stream of workers in their wake. The "main migratory drift" has been from South to North, and from North to West.

Electric Dealers To Have Dinner Wednesday Night

The first in a series of dinner meetings for electrical appliance and equipment dealers and distributors will be held Wednesday at 7 p. m. in Federal Room of the Statler Hotel.

The meetings are sponsored by the Electric Institute of Washington to keep merchants informed on new developments in the field.

R. C. Cosgrove, vice president and general manager of the Crosley Corp., will speak at the opening session on "What's Ahead in the Radio and Appliance Business." Mr. Cosgrove is president of the Radio Manufacturers' Association.

Another speaker will be E. L. Dillard, general manager of the Commercial Radio Equipment Co., who will discuss "FM Radio—Its Potential Market." His talk will include a demonstration of frequency modulation radio.

Planes 'Sniff' Thunderstorms In Test to Boost Air Safety

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Weather Bureau let its thermometers down yesterday and explained how it measures the temperature of a thunderstorm's insides.

There's nothing to it really, said the Weather Bureau modestly. We just use our own temperature sniffer.

The temperature sniffer is one of the gadgets the W. B. had to invent when it decided to poke a thunderstorm in the middle.

The thunderstorm project, in cooperation with the Army, Navy and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, was carried on this summer near Orlando, Fla. The temperature sniffers, located approximately on the airplanes' noses, sniffed temperatures of more than 100 storms.

Dr. E. Dillion Smith, the project's executive officer, said thermometers are all right for slowpokes, but not for an airplane diving into a storm. Here the temperature may change 10 degrees within seconds.

So the temperature sniffer, whose business end is a tiny piece of metal highly sensitive to cold or heat, was developed.

Smith said it was easy to find Army pilots who would volunteer for storm detail, even though they occasionally were kicked around by mile-a-minute vertical currents.

The evidence they and their instruments brought back provides the first documented information on a thunderstorm's habits. And Smith believes that, as soon as it can be analyzed and passed on, it will save many a life in aviation.

Next summer the project will be tried again, somewhere in the Midwest.

"Florida was fine, because it has so many storms," Smith said. "But there aren't any worse storms in the world than in the Midwest.

"I remember one on a trip I was taking over northern Texas. Our plane ran smack into an unscheduled, tremendous storm. Oh, it was a beautiful one. Beautiful."

Montgomery Arrives Here To Be Eisenhower's Guest

By International News Service

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British General Staff, who is making a tour of American military installations, arrived at Washington National Airport at 5:35 p. m. yesterday by plane from New York.

Montgomery will be the guest of Chief of Staff Dwight D. Eisenhower at his Fort Myer, Va., home before returning to New York Tuesday to meet the British members of the United Nations Security Council.

The colorful British army officer stepped jauntily from his plane in the brilliant sunshine and told newsmen that his first visit to New York was a most interesting one.

He remarked, with gestures:

"What a sight! Those skyscrapers! But there are too many people on that island. I could never get my caravan in there."

He paid high tribute to the New York police force, which he said was "amazingly efficient."

As the Field Marshal stepped from the U. S. Army C-47, a petite British lady came forward and introduced herself as "the very first British war bride."

She is Mrs. Frank E. Leland, the former Doris Lines of Kensington, England.

She met her husband, Maj. Leland, Post Exchange officer, at Ft. Belvoir, at a reception at the American Embassy in London in 1941. They were married later that year and she arrived in the United States in 1942.

It was disclosed that Montgomery will continue his conferences tomorrow with U. S. Army officials on American military training methods.

He told newsmen that his visit to the Army Command School at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., was "very interesting."

Witnesses Refused Right of Meeting

Lacona, Iowa, Sept. 15 (AP).—Sheriff Lewis Johnson said an attempt by a group of members of Jehovah's Witnesses to hold a religious meeting here today was "turned back peaceably at the edge of town."

A similar attempted meeting a week ago wound up in fisticuffs in the city park and 30 persons suffered minor injuries when an opposition group of 25 war veterans halted the gathering.

41 Are Injured As Troop Train, Freight Crash

Whitefish, Mont., Sept. 15 (AP).—A headon collision of a troop train and freight injured 41 soldiers and railroad crewmen near this northwest Montana town late last night.

A Seattle-bound troop special and Great Northern freight crashed together with terrific force. The collision piled up 16 lumber-laden cars, and derailed two cars from the special.

Cause of the collision was not immediately determined.

Only two of the injured required hospitalization. First aid sufficed for the 37 soldiers who were hurt. Most seriously injured were the freight train engineer and one Negro porter.

Engineer Dies in Collision

Columbus, Miss., Sept. 15 (AP).—An engineer was killed and several passengers received minor injuries in the headon collision of two Columbus and Greenville railroad trains 6 miles east of Winona, Miss., late yesterday.

Strikes Continue To Harass Japan

Tokyo, Sept. 15 (INS).—Strikes continued to harass Japan today but Katsumi Kikunami, president of Japan's CIO, stated that a general strike is "presently impossible" despite his groups desire to overthrow the present government which it considers "reactionary."

Japan's printing industry is currently strike-bound by 10,000 printers who are protesting mass discharges, and some 10,000 electrical workers, 30,000 longeshoremen and an unknown number of Kyusu and Hokkaido coal miners are also out on strike.

Lost Vessel's Skipper Found Dead in Hotel

Ramsgate England, Sept. 15 (U.P.). Capt. William H. Curran, 56-year-old master of the American Liberty Ship Helena Modjeska which was smashed to bits on Goodwin Sands, was found dead in his hotel room today 36 hours after abandoning the vessel with tears in his eyes.

Circumstances of Curran's death indicated he may either have succumbed to a heart attack as a result of his 24-hour battle to save the ship or that he may have ended his own life in despair.

An autopsy was scheduled tomorrow.

The graying sea captain was a resident of Los Angeles.

The ship's crew was removed safely.

Shortages are holding him back

We in the Bell System were adding telephones at the rate of three million a year until shortages started getting worse. Now it's harder and harder for us to get materials for manufacturing and building.

We aren't complaining for we are in the same boat as every one else. But we thought you might like to know the supply situation on some of the biggest items in the telephone business.

LEAD—There is a world shortage of lead. Even when conditions here straighten out, it will be some time before adequate supplies are available.

COPPER—In great demand but we will probably have adequate supplies when the smelting, refining and fabricating plants get going.

TEXTILES—Serious shortage of cotton and synthetic yarns and fabrics, with demand greatly exceeding supply.

STEEL—Steel and coal strikes have affected supply in face of unprecedented demand.

RUBBER—Synthetics are in fair supply but natural rubber is on Government allocation.

LUMBER—Scarce supply due to unprecedented demand and dislocation of lumber trade.

BRASS MILL PRODUCTS—Used in Central Office switches and other telephone equipment. Supply will be short until disturbed conditions are settled in the copper industry, permitting brass mills to get back to full-scale production.

It's a tough situation, but we aren't giving up, any more than you have given up trying to get butter or sugar or shirts.

We're doing the best we can with what we've got and hoping these disturbed conditions will end, so we can really go full speed ahead.

Reds and Sympathizers March In Behalf of London Squatters

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—Waving banners and shouting antigovernment slogans, many thousands of Communists and sympathizers paraded through the heart of London today in a mile-long mass demonstration of support for London's "luxury squatters."

Twenty-five abreast, the noisy but orderly procession stretched the full length of Oxford Street and doubled in size between Hyde Park and Leicester Square as onlookers fell into line. A band playing "The Internationale" led the marchers.

Cries of "Bevan must go" rang out when speakers mentioned Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan's order to local authorities that electricity, gas and water be shut off from squatter-occupied premises.

Call on Workers

Later the Communist Party issued a statement calling on all working men to "make their full power felt" in support of the squatters and demanding that all eviction orders and conspiracy charges against five Communist leaders be withdrawn.

Police diverted the procession from the Ivanhoe Hotel, one of the largest residential buildings commandeered by home-seeking families. Under Communist direction, squatter organizers have threateened a full-scale invasion of the 620-room hotel, heavily guarded by police.

British Press Attacked

Phil Piratin, one of the two Communist members of Parliament, in a speech to the demonstrators attacked the British press, which has voiced overwhelming support of the Labor Government's campaign to check the squatter movement.

Other speakers protested against the arrest of five prominent Communists who are to be arraigned tomorrow on conspiracy charges in connection with the week-old mass movement into vacant, privately owned dwellings.

A number of squatters and Communist organizers have been summoned to appear in court Tuesday for eviction proceedings. Local authorities in several sections followed instructions and turned off water and electricity to squatter-occupied houses. Three additional London houses were taken over by squatters overnight despite police vigilance.

France and Viet Nam Republic Sign Accord in Surprise Move

Paris, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—France and the new Indo-Chinese government of Viet Nam signed an accord today after many months of negotiations.

It was signed at the Quai d'Orsay in the early hours of the morning by Hi Chi Minh, President of the Republic, and Marius Moutet, French Minister of Colonies. The terms were not immediately revealed, although it was said they would be published within "several days."

The conclusion of the agreement was a surprise, since it followed the breaking up nearly two months ago of the Fontainebleau Conference.

Ho Chi Minh told a press conference this afternoon that the accord was not wholly satisfactory to Viet Nam, but was "better than nothing."

His signing it, he said, gave proof of the desire by Viet Nam for conciliation with France, and he hoped that the Fontainebleau talks could be resumed next January.

Ho Chi Minh said agreement remains to be reached on two important questions: the degree of independence that Viet Nam is to exercise within the French union, and the French plan for a referendum in the neighboring state of Cochin-China, which Viet Nam wants to incorporate into its own territory.

France recognized the Viet Nam Republic of Annamese Nationalists on March 7 as "a free state within the Indo-Chinese Federation and French Union."

Two Brothers Die At Street Parade

Nauvoo, Ill., Sept. 15 (AP)—Earl Golden, 46, toppled dead off his horse during a street parade at the annual Nauvoo grape festival today.

Five minutes later, Martin Golden, 52, a few blocks away among thousands of parade watchers, learned of his brother's death and fell dead. Physicians said heart disease caused both deaths.

All Britain Honors RAF for Its Deeds

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—A Britain divided on many postwar issues found accord today in nation-wide observances honoring RAF crews who six years ago today climaxed the Battle of Britain by destroying 185 German planes.

For the second day people of the cities, towns and villages of southeastern England watched spectacular ceremonial flights. Wherever people met to worship, the deeds and the sacrifices of "The Few" were recalled, in sermon, in memorial ritual, in conversation.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Philip Joubert in an address asserted the Western countries owed their continued existence as free people to the RAF victories early in the war.

Nylon Shortage Expected Soon

By the United Press

There's going to be another stocking shortage and it will hit at the worst possible time—the Christmas holiday season.

A spokesman for the Civilian Production Administration said last night that chances are slim that milady will find a pair of nylons under her Christmas tree. He gave three reasons:

1. DuPont de Nemours Corp., sole manufacturer of nylon, cut the amount of nylon available to stocking manufacturers this month by 15 per cent. Another cut is expected next month because of a shortage of raw materials.

2. Stocking production fell off during the summer because of the large number of workers on vacation.

3. Women went bare-legged during the summer but are now in the market for stockings again and demand is sure to increase.

The only bright spot is that the production of silk hose is increasing. About 49,000 dozen pairs of all-silk stockings were produced in May and 84,000 dozen pairs in July. In addition, 7,500,000 dozen pairs with silk legs were produced in July, whereas virtually none was produced in May.

Arnold Warns Of Monopoly Over WINX

Former Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold warned yesterday that America "will soon be a totalitarian nation" if the growth of monopoly persists.

"We must fight this threat to the survival of our economic system all along the line," the one-time trust buster asserted in a forum over radio station WINX.

He was joined in denunciation of economic concentrations by Sen. James D. Murray (D. Mont.), chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee.

The two agreed that "our so-called capitalistic democracy is facing a precarious future" and "already we are approaching the situation which prevailed in Germany just before Hitler took over."

Murray contended monopolistic structures which expanded at a "jet-propelled tempo" during the war will eventually lead to the "downfall of the economy upon which American business has been nurtured . . . the end of the right to take a chance and make a profit . . . the limitation of governmental power itself."

Both speakers, interviewed by Ed Hart on the program, "Is Congress Doing Its Job," expressed concern over the concentration of industrial research experts at a handful of companies. Murray suggested that Congress enact legislation to prevent monopolistic practices "concerning the use of patents and patent pools."

At the same time the Senator suggested that Congress "reexamine the disposal policies of the War Assets Administration" to "make sure that they increase the sphere of competition by their policies rather than increase industrial concentration and monopoly."

He recommended creation of a board to coordinate antitrust activities and business regulating activities of the Government.

Arnold, formerly head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, hailed the action of Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia in his fight with the railroads over freight rate fixing.

Simultaneously, he called for expenditure of more money for trust busting activity and warned that "monopolists' stooges in Congress are very stingy with money for antimonopoly regulations." He urged that "more States and even municipalities come into the courts to fight these selfish interests that ignore the well-being of whole areas of America."

Legion Expects 80% of Kin To Want Return of War Dead

American Legion officials estimated yesterday that approximately 80 per cent of the American families who lost a member overseas in World War II desire the return of the bodies for final burial in this country.

Next month the Quartermaster General of the United States Army will officially poll next-of-kin on the same question. The Government will offer four choices to relatives, according to the legion:

1. Burial may be in permanent American military cemeteries overseas.

2. Bodies may be returned to the United States for burial in a National cemetery restricted to members of the armed forces.

3. Bodies may be returned to the United States for burial in a private cemetery with the Government paying up to $50 of the burial expenses.

4. Bodies may be sent to a foreign country, the homeland of the deceased for interment in a private cemetery if permission can be obtained.

The current shortage of steel caskets will delay return of bodies from overseas until spring, the Legion said. At that time special ships will bring the war dead to distribution ports on both coasts. From these points bodies will be sent to 15 distribution centers throughout the country.

After World War I the bodies of 46,310 of the 77,901 American battle dead were returned to the United States for final burial. During World War II more than 328,000 American servicemen died overseas.

POVICH

DETROIT, Sept. 15.—The reports of Hank Greenberg's retirement from baseball are now definitely tabbed as premature. A while back, big Hank himself was not taking the trouble to deny that he was done as a ballplayer, but his bat is now speaking most eloquently for him in loud rebuttal.

In the Tigers' last two games, Henry has belted three homers plus a three-run double. He drove in all of the Detroit runs in a 7-4 victory over the Yankees, and is not unaware that he has a new talking point if the Tigers attempt to cut his $55,000 salary by too much.

"You might say," said Hank grinning, "that I'm making my annual fall salary drive," but the fact is he wasn't jesting a whole lot.

Interesting was the fact that Greenberg's two homers and his double against the Yanks was off the pitching of no less than Spud Chandler. "I hope you noted it was Chandler pitching," said Hank.

"You mean the new Chandler," Hank was told. "Chandler isn't in the habit of letting one man bat in seven runs off him."

"Maybe it's a combination of the new Chandler and the old Greenberg," smiled Hank.

IT ISN'T a good season for Greenberg who has been laboring with a .260 average for most of the year, but lately it's up to .270, and there are other figures that are in his favor which will be very quotable when he talks contract again with Owner Walter O. Briggs this winter.

For a .270 hitter, Greenberg's feats have been somewhat prodigious. He's only a breath behind Ted Williams for the homerun crown with his 37 homers to Williams' 38, and he has batted in 110 runs, only nine fewer than Williams.

The startling item, in retrospect, is that the retirement of a guy who can produce as many runs as Greenberg was considered at all, but until lately it was not illogical. Hank in midseason was suffering from both a low pulse and a low batting average, and he had just married into the Gimbel family wealth and he had declared he would not play baseball if it came to the point where he was a handicap to the Tigers.

The present evidence is, however, that he can convince Mr. Briggs that he represents value to the Tigers. On performance, maybe he didn't earn the $55,000 he drew this season, but he came closer than any other member of the club except possibly Hal Newhouser.

It would be a feat for Greenberg in a year when he is hitting only .270 to top Williams for the homerun leadership, particularly with Williams outhitting him by 70 points and being acclaimed as the latter-day Ruth.

You have to like Greenberg's chances of ending up with the homerun crown. Only one behind Williams, he has eight more games than Williams to look forward to. From Chicago today came the announcement that Williams and seven other Red Sox were going back to Boston to rest up from their pennant victory, and thus Ted will miss the Red Sox series in St. Louis.

A PARODY to the old ditty, "Who Threw the Overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder," is now being sung in the Detroit press box. It concerns Manager Steve O'Neill, who is hospitalized after suffering a sprained ankle in the Tigers' dressing room, in a hazily reported accident.

"Who threw the chair at Steve O'Neill" is the unanswered query. The Detroit players aren't talking. All they'll say is that Manager O'Neill innocently stepped into a bit of chair-skidding by-play among the players and took it on the shins in the best tradition of the innocent bystander.

O'Neill is going to recover all right, and more than that—sometime this week he's going to be told that he's done a good job of getting the Tigers into second place, and will be handed a contract for 1947. That should stifle the season-long reports that O'Neill would get the heav-ho.

LATE THIS afternoon when the news of the Dodgers' defeat by the Cubs and the Cardinals' double victory over the Giants was heard, a Boston-St. Louis World Series seemed assured—and with it the longest possible train ride in the majors.

On Saturday when the Dodgers had licked the Cardinals two in a row, and a Boston-Brooklyn World Series seemed in prospect, Tom Meany had cracked: "This is going to be a blow to the Pennsylvania Railroad."

"Yeah," replied an unidentified gagster, "I guess we won't get any calendars this year."

Griff Hurler Delivers as Pinch-Hitter

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Detroit, Sept. 15.—Manager Ossie Bluege second-guessed himself with perfection this afternoon, and the Nats out-thumped the Tigers 15 to 5, in a noisy battle of seven home runs.

With the bases full of Nats in the fifth inning, Bluege sent George Binks to the plate as pinch hitter and then was smitten by a happy afterthought. Before Binks could take a swing, Bluege called time, withdrew Binks and motioned to the center field bull pen for Early Winn, who came a-running.

It is correct to say that Pitcher Wynn did was haul off and hit a pinch hitter, but in this case it is an understatement because what Wynn did was a haul off and hit a line-drive, four-run homer into the right field stands. Thus did he make Bluege's strategy look practically flawless.

Wynn's Blow Does It

Wynn's was only one of the three Washington home runs of the day (the Tigers got four) but it was the crusher for the Detroit club and its 35,546 customers. His swat lifted the Nats' lead at that point to 11-3, and sealed the ball game.

Wynn didn't rest on his hitting laurels, however. He went to the pitching mound to replace Roger Wolff, and held the Tigers to two runs in the last five innings to gain credit for the victory.

Wolff's trouble was that he was pitching home runs to the Tigers almost as fast as the Nats were scoring runs off Dizzy Trout whose five-game winning streak they terminated by knocking him out of the box in the fifth. Wynn hit his homer off Johnny Gorsica. They belted Trout for their first seven runs.

Lewis Gets Five Hits

The Nats were a rugged hitting crew today, with 17 safe swats against four Detroit pitchers. Buddy Lewis rapped out five for himself, topping them off with a homer in the ninth. In the eighth, Stan Spence smacked his fifteenth homer of the year into the right-field stands with two aboard.

Until the ninth inning, when Hank Greenberg knocked in the Tigers' fifth run with a single, the Detroits were scoring only when they hit home runs. They hit four, all with the bases empty.

The Nats didn't dally much with Trout, banging him for two runs in the first inning when Lewis beat out a hit off the pitcher's glove and Joe Grace and Mickey Vernon followed with doubles.

Wolff pitched one right back to the Tigers in the same inning when Hoot Evers homered into the left-field seats, and in the next inning the Tigers tied it up on Roy Cullenbine's homer to right.

Greenberg Clouts 37th Homer

Cecil Travis got the Nats out in front again with a single to center in the fourth that scored Vernon, who had walked, and Spence who had doubled, but Wolff's home run ball was still working, and the Tigers got a run back in the same inning. It was Greenberg's thirty-seventh homer of the year.

So the Nats went into the fifth leading, 4-3. They came out of it on top, 11-3. Lewis singled and Trout filled the bases on walks to Spence and Vernon. Travis drilled a two-run single between Trout's legs and Jake Early banged a one-run single to right. Hitchcock drew a walk to refill the bases and that's where Wynn stepped up to take his four-run cut.

Travis not only drove in four of the Nats' first six runs but he saved Wolff's hide with some fancy play around third base in the first four innings . . . The Nats presented seven left-handed hitters in a row against the right-handed Trout, with Sherry Robertson playing second base, a new role . . . Spence's double in the fourth was a near-homer that struck the top of the right-field screening and bounded back to the playing field. . . . Buck Newsom faces his old pals, the Tigers, in tomorrow's game, with Al Benton his pitching opponent . . . The Nats' victory widened their fourth-place margin over the White Sox to four games.

Vernon Boosts Average to .354

Mickey Vernon, Nats first-sacker, continued his heavy hitting of the past week by getting two for three yesterday in Detroit to boost his league leading batting average to .354.

Ted Williams, of the Red Sox, Vernon's closest rival, went one for four in the first game and dropped a point to .343. Williams was benched in the nightcap. Johnny Pesky, also of the Red Sox, collected three for eight in the twin bill to maintain his .337 average. How it stands:

	AB	R	H	Ave.
Vernon, Nats.	534	79	189	.354
Williams, R. S.	496	140	170.	343
Pesky, R. Sox	593	113	200	.337

Bee Bee Held 7-5 Tonight Over Hursey

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

They won't be settling any championship, except over each other, but Bee Bee Washington and Smuggy Hursey are expected to put on one of the season's best brawls tonight as they tangle in a 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium.

It will be Foggy Bottom against Southeast Washington in the second all-local middleweight feature at the park. And the styles and past performances of the two colored favorites make an exciting evening a certainty.

Bee Bee, quoted as a 7-5 favorite but a likely 3-1 favorite by ringtime, holds the dubious distinction of having lost the summer's biggest fight. He was knocked out by Aaron Perry before a $54,000 house in one of his two losses in three years. In the other he was cut up and dropped a nod to Ossie Harris.

Hursey's Record Impressive

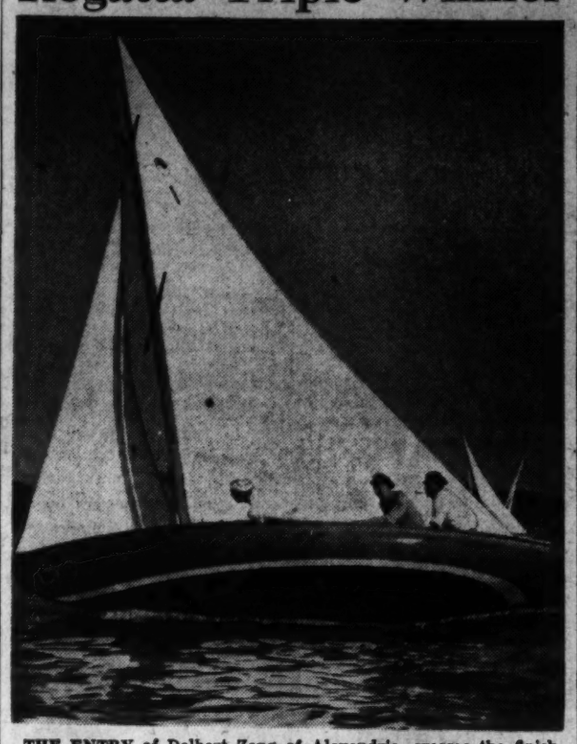
Eighteen-year-old Smuggy has a better record recently. In his last outing he beat Mexican Nava Esaraza, and preveiously he stopped Al Cortez and George Williams and lost a decision to the terrific Danny Kapilow.

Smuggy's hopes for an upset hinge on his two-fisted, whirlwind type of attack, his youth and the knowledge a victory over the seasoned Bee Bee will boost his fistic stock immensely. He'll be facing a slightly heavier, stronger foe with both height and reach on him. The Bee's rooters will be expecting his straight, hard lefts to keep Smuggy at a distance, perhaps knock him out.

Preliminary Card

Washington's Jimmy McGriff and Cowboy Bill Peterson, of Billings, Mont., are supposed to feature preliminaries in an 8-rounder, but spectators' will probably get their biggest kick from the antics of Red Jeeter, screwball local heavyweight, against Wilbur Mason in a four. Ben Brown and George Brooks, heavyweights, go for six rounds, and Ruben Young meets Art Bethea in another six.

Regatta Triple Winner



THE ENTRY of Delbert Zang of Alexandria, crosses the finish line first in the Chesapeake 20 (round) class for the third time in two days yesterday at the President's Cup Regatta sailboat races on the Potomac

Deacon Pilots Armade To Star Class Title

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Arthur M. Deacon, 24-year-old Navy veteran and skipper of the 22½-foot, white-hulled Armade, conclusively proved his mastery in the Star Class of the President's Cup Regatta yesterday as he guided his sailing craft to a comfortable victory over the Cygnet, owned and piloted by Owen C. Torrey, on the Potomac River.

The Larchmont, Long Island, former international champion glided into a half mile lead at the end of the first lap and then took the measure of his Scarsdale, N. Y., foe by 8 minutes and 20 seconds.

Despite the fact that there were six other entries the Star Class feature had developed into a virtual match race between Deacon, who had won the morning race Saturday and Torrey who had taken the afternoon race.

Shamrock Scores Again

The perfect weather that has prevailed since the regatta began last weekend, once more played an important part in bringing out a large crowd. The lack of a stiff breeze caused the events involving lighter craft to be cut by one lap.

Two of the three double victors on Saturday swept to their third straight wins yesterday and thereby clinched first prize Evening Star trophies. The Shamrock, skippered by Delbert Zang of Galesville, Md., competing in the Chesapeake 20 (round) class, and Side Car, skippered by John R. Reckord of Towson, Md., entered in the penguin division, were the three-time victors.

Dr. Ray's Boat Wins

The third Saturday double winner, Flying Cloud, a 16-foot entry, owned by Dr. Enos Ray, Washington, took second place in the third race, but his heavy first day point total gave him top honors in his class.

Dodger, a snipe entry that divided honors with Rub-A-Dub on Saturday, finally settled matters in yesterday's rubber match, winning by a quarter of a mile. Dodger was piloted by Eric A. Hauschild of Lake Mohawk, N. J. Rub-A-Dub, skippered by J. F. Stillman of Philadelphia finished far back.

Miss Edith Drucie Snyder, queen of the regatta, and daughter of John Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, presented the U. S. Steel Corporation trophy to Deacon, winner of the Star Class. Secretary Snyder was present.

Ferriss Gets 25th for Sox

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Dave Ferriss won his 25th game of the season today when the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 1, but Chicago won the second game of a double header, 6 to 0, behind Johnny Rigneys three-hit pitching.

Rudy York's 16th homer of the season clinched the first game with Bobby Doerr on base.

Giants Yield Twice; Cubs Upset Dodgers

Chicago Tops Brooks, 4-3, Then Bows, 2-0

Brooklyn, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, behind Kirby Higbie's one-hit pitching, came back from an opening game, 4-3, 10-inning defeat today to shut out the Chicago Cubs, 2-0, in the afterpiece of a doubleheader that was called after five innings because of darkness and a sudden swarm of gnats which infested the park.

The dodgers got both their second game runs against Hank Borowy in the first inning. Ed Stanky drew a walk, was sacrificed to second and scored on Augie Galan's hit. Galan reached second when Bill Nicholson fumbled the ball and came home on Dixie Walkers double.

Higbie pitched perfect ball in four of the five innings in winning his sixteenth game. In the second, with two out, Mickey Livingston singled and went to second as Nicholson walked. But Billy Jurges flied out.

The Dodgers fought back in their half of the 10th, scoring once and leaving two runners on base when Ed Stevens flied out to end the game. With one away, Walker singled but Emil Kush, who had relieved Johnny Schmitz in the eighth, fanned Carl Furillo. Augie Galan came through with a double that scored Walker. Catcher Bruce Edwards then shot a line single to left but Galan was forced to halt at thir dwhen Leftfielder Peanuts Lowrey made a fast recovery and fired the ball home. Kush then got Stevens on a soft fly.

St. Louis Scores By 3-0 and 7-4

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals swept a doubleheader from The New York Giants 3-0 and 7-4 today to increase their National League lead to a game and a half over the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers who split a twin bill with the Chicage Cubs.

After Murray Dickson had limited the Giants to three harmless safeties in registering his thirteenth victory against five defeats in the first game, the Cards had to use three pitchers, including their ace, Howie Pollet, to gain the decision in the second game.

Alpha Brazle, Redbird starter, was breezing along on a 5-1 lead, going into the eighth inning when without warning, the Giants fell upon him for three straight hits. George Munger was summoned to the mound, but, after giving up a run-producing single to Sid Gordon, he made way for Pollet.

Babe Young greeted Pollet with another runscoring single, but the lean lefthander retired the next five men to preserve the Cards' win.

Bill Voiselle was the losing pitcher.

Stan Musial, held to a single in the opener, lashed out three hits, including a two-run homer in the ninth inning, to pace the Cards at bat. Whitey Kurowski and Harry Walker also collected three hits in the second game.

Rookie Beats Bob Feller

Cleveland, Sept. 15 (INS).—Rookie Bill McCahan of Philadelphia outpitched the great Bob Feller today, 2 to 0, after the Indians had beaten the Athletics in the curtain-raiser, 8 to 0.

Although the nightcap was held to seven innings, Feller fanned seven to bring his season's total to 315—two more than Walter Johnson's total of 313 in 1910. It was Feller's thirteenth defeat.

Rock Creek Show Won by Grey Lark

Grey Lark had a cumulative score of 18 points. Bonne Fille, owned and ridden by Robert C. Lee, was awarded reserve with 10 points.

Potomac Riding School made a clean sweep of the stable-owned division.

Martin's Cateer Jumper Winner

The horse and pony show sponsored by the Mt. Calvary Catholic Church held yesterday on J. B. Bland's farm at Suitland, Md., attracted a field of topnotch entries and an audience of well over 3000 enthusiasts.

Veteran campaigners came to the fore as Dave Martin's Cateer outjumped a stellar field to take the jumper championship with 12 points.

Reserve went to the seasoned performer Troop, formerly shown in hunter classes only, owned by the Suitland Stables.

U. S. Randle from Warrenton, Va., and the District, dominated the hunter division as his Claws won the hunter title with 13½ points.

The Southern Maryland Jumper class was taken by J. B. Bland's Grestone.

Race Driver Dies At Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Al Putnam, 37, one of the Nation's top racing drivers, was killed instantly today when his car crashed into a cement wall during a qualification run for an American Automobile Association 100-mile dirt track race before 20,000 at the Indianapolis State Fairgrounds.

His car, a four-cylinder Palmer Special, skidded, smashed through the outer railing and into the wall. He was thrown 10 feet into the air.

Large Crowd Expected At Benefit Game

Major and Superintendent Harvey G. Callahan, of the Metropolitan Police Department, last night predicted that thousands of dollars will be raised for the family of the late Donald W. Downs, District patrolman killed while directing traffic recently, through the national junior championship game bringing together Police Boys Club No. 5 and Boys Brigade of Baltimore at Griffith Stadium Wednesday night.

The pregame entertainment will feature musical selections rendered by both the Metropolitan Police Department and Metropolitan Police Boys Club bands, Tumbling teams of both the Police Boys Club and Trinidad Boys Club also will perform.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 15—The Redskins had a field day against their Norfolk Shamrock farm club here today, rolling to an easy 56-0 victory that came close to being costly.

Late in the third period, Fullback Frank Akins, second leading ground gainer behind Steven Van Buren last year, suffered a wrenched knee that will keep him sidelined for several days and possibly for the Chicago Bear game next Sunday in Baltimore.

The big fellow was hit hard while spearheading a Redskin touchdown drive by a horde of Shamrocks and and had to be carried from the field. At first it was feared his leg was broken but a later examination revealed only slight wrench. The Washington Stater scored two touchdowns before his narrow escape.

Youel, Jacobs Lead Parade

As for the game, the Redskins romped at will with Jim Youel and Jack Jacobs taking over and running the show after Sammy Baugh chucked the Redskins to their first touchdown in the first period. Both did well with Youel shading the Indian slightly.

Every Redskin with the exception of Wilbur Moore and Bob DeFruiter took part. Even Jack Jenkins, fractured wrist and all, came in to kick an extra point, after the second Redskin touchdown.

Eight times the Redskins crossed the Shamrock goal line. Their scoring ranged from a 78-yard drive down to a 5-yard quickie that came after Ed Clfers recovered a Shamrock fumble at that point. Also included in the scoring was a 30-yard dash by Jacobs after intercepting former Redskin Larry Weldon's pass. They scored in every period.

Price, Kreuzburg Take Club Crowns

By Oscar Elder

Two District Country Club golf champions were crowned yesterday, Charles Price capturing the Kenwood title with a 3-and-2 victory over Dick Kreuzburg, while Tom Manning defeated G. C. Rittenhouse, 4 and 3, in the scheduled 36-hole final at Washington Aviation Country Club.

Playing his first competitive golf in five years, the 21-year-old Price, who was discharged from the Navy last June after three years' service, eliminated two former titlists, Joe Wilson and Don Miller, on his way to the Kenwood championship. Yesterday he came from behind to whip Kreuzburg, a former Marine, who ousted the 1945 champion and runnerup en route to his finals.

This was the first Kenwood crown for Price, former Georgetown Prep player, who played his prewar golf at Indian Spring.

Tom Manning was out front most of the way on his climb to the Washington Aviation championship. At the end of the morning 18 he held a 4 up lead. Rittenhouse staged a comeback on the third nine, however, to pare the winners' advantage to 2 up at the end of 27 holes and then cut it further by winning the 28th.

The 29th was halved, but Manning won three of the next four holes to settle the issue on the 33d green.

KENWOOD

Final results of other flights in the club championship were: First flight consolation, Joe Wilson defeated R. N. Cook, 4 and 3; second flight, Ralph Benner defeated Marvin Wire, 1 up; third flight, K. E. Kimball defeated Dr. J. W. Nesbitt, 1 up; fourth flight, E. D. Stephenson defeated G. J. Parr, 4 and 3; fifth flight, H. M. Higgins defeated C. W. Simpson, 6 and 3; sixth flight, R. E. Dille defeated E. L. Smead, 1 up; seventh flight, H. J. Cooper defeated F. H. Warren, 3 and 2; eighth flight, E. V. Brumfiel defeated Franklin Ford, 5 and 4; ninth flight, W. W. Fort defeated A. P. Bell, 4 and 3; tenth flight, C. A. Jostes defeated Dr. A. B. Crawford, 5 and 4; eleventh flight, J. D. Richardson defeated F. W. Perkins, 5 and 4.

MANOR

Medalist Bobby Brownell scored a bloodless victory in the first round of the club championship tourney, winning from M. J. Crawford by default. In other opening matches Tom Doerer defeated W. G. McCreary, 2 and 1, and L. D. Ritter retired W. L. Hurd, jr., 3 and 2. In championship flight second-round play John R. Miller defeated George McGehee, 2 and 1, and R. P. Gibson eliminated J. LeRoy Smith, 3 and 2.

ARMY-NAVY

Col. Ken Buchanan, titlist, was forced out of the 1946 championship by duty taking him out of Washington for a month. He defaulted to Col. W. W. Smith. Other first-round results: Capt. J. S. Phillips, USN, defeated Comdr. T. R. Kurtz, jr., 2 up; Dr. E. J. Cummings defeated Capt. W. R. Dowd, 3 and 2; Col. J. A. Bauer defeated L. V. Steele, 4 and 3; Col F. A. Mountford defeated Comdr. J. Vinn, jr., 4 and 3; Col. W. W. Roberts defeated W. J. Clinch, 2 and 1; Col. C. H. Pottenger defeated A. C. Puryear, 2 up; Comdr. M. M. McGhee defeated Col. F. L. Elder, 3 and 2.

BELLE HAVEN

Col. Ben Schriever fired a one-under-par 36, 35—71 to claim medal honors in the club championship qualifying play. Other low qualifiers making the first flight were Alex Guyol, 74; Paul Lipps, 75; J. B. Murphy, 75; Mike Duffy, 75; Eddie Edwards, 75; J. A. Young, 77; Comdr. Howard Sias, 77; Jack Kurtz, 78; Mr. Sharp, 78; C. C. Heath, 79; Jack Sinclair, 79; Charles Holden, jr., 79; Al Brooks, 79; Frank Youry, 79, and Frank Clarke, 79.

CONGRESSIONAL

M. Parker Nolan set the pace with a 38, 35—73 in the club championship qualifying. Other low scorers were Frank Pace, 77; George J. Richardson, 78; Eugene Pittman, 79; H. L. Anderson, 79, and C. P. Given, 79. Match play opens next weekend.

WASHINGTON

Defending Champion Claude Rippy put in his bid to repeat in the club championship by qualifying with a one-over-par 36, 35—71. Other early finishers were W. C. McCabe, 74, and Lieut. Comdr. C. M. Featherstone, 74. Entries have until next Sunday to qualify for the club's titular tourney.

WOODMONT

Triple ties for the medal in the two upper brackets featured the qualifying round in the club's handicap tournament. The first-round matches must be played before next Sunday. Players should call the golf shop for information regarding first-round pairings.

Deadlocked for Class A medal were Dr. H. S. Bernstein, 77—10—67; Lester Rosenberg, 77—10—67, and Ned Bord, 76—9—67. Tied in Class B were Dr. J. H. Hirsch, 87—16—71; Dr. Dan Gevinson, 86—15—71, and H. B. Jacobson, 93—21—71. Morris Rodman, 94—24—70, won medal honors in Class C.

EAST POTOMAC

Paced by the lo wgross 74 fired by Earl Marcey, recent winner of the District public links title, East Potomac, defeated the Anacostia team, 11½-6½, in the rubber match of the team series for the Davis Cup. Other low scorers were Joe Kotvan, 76; and Dr. Cole and Joe Micker, 78.

Phillies Win In 11th, Take Fifth Place

Philadelphia, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies surged into fifth place in the National League today with a 6-to-5 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates in an 11-inning duel watched by 14,279.

Pepper Leads Wallace in Left Applause

By the Associated Press

Politicians are speculating that Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) may be replacing Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace as favorite spokesman of those elements which describe themselves as left of other Democratic Party groups.

The talk stems principally from audience reaction last Thursday night in Madison Square Garden where both made foreign policy speeches to an audience of 19,000 in a meeting sponsored by the National Citizens Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Both Pepper and Wallace have been strong advocates of a conciliatory policy toward Russia. But on that night Pepper had the crowd with him when he went further in that vein than the former Vice President.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said it looked to him, as an outsider in the case, as if Pepper was becoming the outstanding exponent of "those who hold pro-Russian views."

Representative Cox (D., Ga.) asserted that President Truman's disavowal yesterday of any approval of Wallace's speech as a statemept of foreign policy showed the President still is backing Secretary of State Byrnes and ought to arouse public opinion "to chase him (Wallace) from his position in the administration."

Jews Threaten More Violence In Holy Land

Jerusalem, Sept. 15 (AP)—The secret radio of Irgun Zvai Leumi said tonight, as Palestine police announced the arrest of 22 members of the Jewish underground organization, that disturbances fostered by the organization would be intensified throughout the Holy Land.

Violent operations directed by Irgun Zvai Leumi, the broadcaster declared, hitherto had been carried out sporadically, but in the future would follow in rapid succession.

Official sources said tonight that a Jewish band attacked a police station in the Sarafand area of Palestine, but was driven off after detonating an explosive charge which wrecked the power line to the station. Although an exchange of shots between policemen and the attackers was reported, it was not indicated whether casualties resulted.

Earlier, the Palestine police said the 23 Irgun members were arrested in Haifa and that a number of those seized were "high on our wanted list."

The speaker did not state during his secret broadcast whether the most recent of Palestine outbreaks—bank holdups in Tel Aviv and Jaffa in which three Arabs were killed—were perpetrated by members of Irgun Zvai Leumi. Police believe the bank bandits were members of the Stern gang, another illegal Jewish organization.

The broadcaster declared, however, that Irgun was in need of funds, not having access to the financial resources held by Hagana, the largest Jewish resistance movement in Palestine.

Hagana also drew the fire of the radio speaker, who attacked it for what he termed its moderate attitude to alleged abuses of Zionists and for a complete lack of cooperation with Irgun. Yesterday Hagana denounced the bank robberies.

"We will be alone, but we have now more adherents than we had a year ago," he said. "This is now a fresh start in the fight for freedom."

The broadcaster charged that the British planned the creation of "a ghetto in Palestine, ruled by a puppet government under the leadership of another Petain or Laval." Unless the Jewish Agency for Palestine decides to fight with the Jewish forces of resistance, he added, "there will be no other choice than to accept such an end—the end of Zionism."

In Jerusalem the Jewish Agency executive said in a statement it "condemns in the strongest possible terms" the recept acts of violence in Palestine.

The statement said such "acts of gangsterdom" were senseless and damaging to the cause of the Jews.

The agency deplored the toll of innocent Arab lives, "particularly because in these days of strained relations every effort was always made on the part of the Jews to prevent injury or suffering to people with whom we have no quarrel."

Three Arabs were killed in the bank holdups.

To Resume Discussions

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—Britons and Arabs sit down to their second week of discussions on the Holy Land's future tomorrow with neither Palestine Arabs nor Jews present and no indication that either group would break its boycott.

Head of Adventurers' Club Set To Venture Into 'Wilds' of U. S.

Seeking to carry out the aims of the Adventurers' Club of Denmark, Knude Clauson Kaas, president of the group, is now in Washington preparing for a coast to coast tour in order to "undergo exceptional experiences in exceptional places."

Kaas, who is staying with Maj. Gen. Christian Forslev, Danish military and air attache here, at 4506 Edmund st. nw., arrived here several months ago with his daughter, Eva, 20, to start a trip he has been planning for several years.

Author, lecturer, quizmaster, draftsman and flier all apply to Kaas. However, during the war he put these vocations aside to assist in the smuggling of Jews from Denmark into safer Sweden.

"We carried them in fishing boats, hidden in barrels and boxes, always on the lookout for the many German patrol boats in Oresund. Oresund is the body of water between Denmark and Sweden," he explained.

Unable to purchase a new car and trailer, Kaas located a used 30-passenger school bus and has been busy in the past few weeks making many renovations.

The seats were torn out and now the bus contains a sink with running water from a 40-gallon tank, a three-burner kerosene stove, a writing table, bed, two closets, drawer space, refrigerator, shower bath, collapsible bathtub, toilet, a Pullman-type sink, radio, dining table, a davenport which opens to form two beds, medicine chest, radio, movie camera and fishing tackle.

Traveling in this luxurious style, Kaas, his daughter, and a friend, Miss Olga Rasmussen, who is expected to arrive from Denmark next week, will see the scenic spots of the United States and do a little exploring on the side, Kaas said.

En route Kaas expects to give several lectures on Denmark, illustrated by a color film made there. In addition, he plans to exhibit 35 water color paintings made by a fellow Dane, who is known only as Gitz.

Dr. Ford H. Swetnam

Funeral services for Dr. Ford H. Swetnam, 62, Fairfax County medical examiner, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Truro Episcopal Church in Fairfax. Burial will be in Fairfax Cemetery.

Dr. Swetnam had been ill since January. He died Saturday at his home after a heart attack.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susan J. Swetnam; two sons, John M., of Luray, Va., and Ford Tyler, who lived with his parents at Fairfax; two sisters, Mrs. William B. Ford of Luray and Mrs. Dallas Berry of Orlando, Fla., and a brother, William R. Swetnam of Luray.

Dr. Swetnam was born at Fairfax Station, Va., and lived in Fairfax County all his life. He was graduated from Virginia Military Institute and Georgetown University Medical School. Ten years ago he retired from his medical practice, but returned to medicine as a county official.

Mrs. Annie Goossens

London, Sept. 15 (AP). — Mrs. Annie Goossens, 86, mother of Eugene Goossens, composer and conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and of three other world-celebrated musicians, died in her suburban London home today.

A second son, Leon, generally is ranked as one of the greatest living oboists, and two daughters, Sodionie and Marie, are harpists. Their father, Eugene, sr., achieved eminence as an operatic conductor.

Russell Whelan

Bayside, N. Y., Sept. 15 (AP).—Russell Whelan, 45, author of "Flying Tigers," story of the American volunteer group in China under Lieut. Gen. Claire Chennault, died yesterday of a heart attack while playing golf.

Whelan wrote his account of Chennault's fliers while serving as radio director of united China relief, from which post he retired last May after five years.

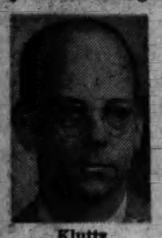
Patterson Asks Delay To Meet Job Ceiling

WAR: Secretary Patterson has requested his department be given a 30-day delay to meet the October 1 personnel ceiling fixed by the Budget Bureau. The bureau, where the request was made, can be expected to grant a delay, if only for two weeks.



Kluttz

Patterson made the move to give added protection to permanent employes and veterans, many of whom were given dismissal notices. He told the bureau that his department had been given too short a time to find these deserving people other jobs in the department.

The department plans, if the delay is granted, as expected, to give the permanents and veterans the opportunity to accept jobs in other offices that are filled by war service and temporary people, even if the jobs are of a lower grade.

War must reduce its staff by about 50,000 jobs under the budget order, but a survey shows that about 20,000 of them are vacant, and only 30,000 will have to be fired to get within the ceiling.

VA STORY: A hard bitten parachuter recently was hired by the Veterans Administration and he was assigned to work in its headquarters on Vermont ave. A day or so later he was told that two VA employes had plunged to their deaths in recent months from the top floors in the building. That gave the parachuter an idea—he went to his supervisor to suggest "jump pay" for all the employes who work above the second floor.

UNRRA: Its liquidation plans are fouled up by the month's delay in the UN general assembly meeting. The general assembly must approve, and money must be raised, before the proposed International Refugee Organization can take over UNRRA's big displaced persons activity.

The relief and rehabilitation agency wants to liquidate by January 1. But now, it may not be able to meet that deadline fixed by Director General LaGuardia.

NAVY: This department here is already 400 employes below its October 1 ceiling, but it may hire up to the ceiling if terminal leave work goes up as expected.

Its Bureau of Personnel has set up a 200-man staff to give information on the Terminal Leave Act of Navy GI's. Half of these people were taken off other work in the bureau and the other half were surplus in other Navy offices. The Bureau of Personnel has put in an order for 100 additional people immediately, and its officials forsee a top staff of 800 if they get the number of queries as is predicted.

WAR: It has asked the Budget Bureau not to count pregnant women out on sick leave against its personnel ceiling. Several hundred are involved. The department makes the point that the women are out from two to three months and they are all counted as active employes under the present regulations. Further, a good percentage don't return.

PEOPLE: Carey Shaw Jr. is the new personnel director in the management branch of War's chief of staff. He replaces Charles J. Francis who transferred to the personnel office of the Central Intelligence Group. Shaw formerly was personnel chief in the Office of International Trade . . . Paul Duncan will be administrative assistant to Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, the Democratic whip. He's a member of the OPA information staff . . . At Agriculture, Edward F. Knipling is the new chief of the Division of Insects affecting man and animals in the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine.

VETERANS: The Council of Personnel Administration is making headway on that survey of promotions among veterans. The study is reasonably certain to lead to a uniform promotion policy for veterans.

The study will cover grade promotions given veterans and nonveterans in each Federal agency since 1939 with no regard to seniority.

The investigation of promotions was demanded by General Erskine, director of Retraining and Reemployment Administration. Frankly, the general believes veterans haven't had their fair share of grade promotions.

NOTES: In the next Congress, the historical State of Virginia will be represented by two Senators who were both born in West Virginia—Senator Harry F. Byrd, and Senator-to-be Willis A. Robertson. This will be the first time such a thing has happened . . . The American Federation of Government Employes opens its first postwar convention today in St. Paul. It will go on record with a stout demand for higher Federal salaries and it will have the backing of the AFL.

POLITICS: Republicans as well as Democrats are demanding the names and addresses of Federal workers in their States. More than one Republican, it seems, is convinced that a majority of the Federal workers will vote the GOP ticket this fall. From all indications, Federal workers in nearby Virginia and Maryland voted Republican by a large majority in 1944.

Rev. Fraser Urges Report Be Defeated

Complete defeat of the majority report of the Joint Commission on Approaches to Unity of the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches in the U.S.A. was urged yesterday by the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, jr., rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Alexandria.

Four specific objections to the report, now being considered by the House of Bishops of the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, were cited by the Rev. Mr. Fraser in a sermon during the 11 a. m. service yesterday.

Quoting from proposals of the joint commission's majority report, the Rev. Mr. Fraser charged that "the spiritual upbuilding of the congregation" would be entrusted to a parish council, which "would easily limit the ministry of the ordained clergyman to the oversight of the worship of the parish" and this only "with the advice of the council."

Provision Is Attacked

Attacking the provision for "formal services of mutual recogniiton" of ministers of the two churches, ordained before the union is affected, he observed that "in effect this is an admission on the part of both groups that their present orders of ministry are not complete," and added that "no clergyman of the Holy Catholic Church can do so unless he is entering into a compromise which is tantamount to a denial of his orders."

The rector also pointed out that "the Book of Common Prayer would give place in 25 years to a 'common service book of the united church.'"

"The revision of this treasury of devotion by our own church is serious enough without running the risk of scrapping it completely," he declared.

Finally, the Rev. Mr. Fraser charged "the present proposals give one a feeling that they have been prepared in a spirit of compromise and compulsion."

"At the present time, nothing better could happen to the whole cause of Christian unity than the complete defeat of the majority report and that the half-hearted efforts of the past would give way to a sincere fellowship and love among all Christian churches," he urged.

Action Seen This Week

Action on the majority report is expected early this week in the House of Bishops. If passed, it will be returned to the House of Deputies for further action; if rejected, the matter will come before the Lambeth Conference of all bishops of the Anglican Communion in 1948 with the request that a commission be appointed to investigate it thoroughly.

The Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, favors study of the commission proposals during the next three years by all clergy and laymen of the church. He pointed out that the report had not been given wide circulation "necessary for complete understanding," and thinks negotiations aimed at union of the churches "should not be summarily broken off."

Buoyant Spirit Helpful for Uneven Motion

"The only way we can face the uneven motions of the world today is by preserving our buoyancy of spirit," Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, said yesterday.

Dr. Brooks

Religion will give the needed "strength, stability, serenity and inner defense," he said.

The minister, who described this year as the most crucial in history of mankind, took as the theme of his sermon the seventeenth century prayer:

"Fix thou our steps, O Lord, that we stagger not at the uneven motions of the world, but go steadily on our way, neither censuring our journey by the weather we meet, nor turning aside for anything that may befall us."

"Too often we censure our journey by the weather," which "is not always ideal in the physical or the human realm," Dr. Brooks said.

"Man must remember that even though that the clouds of the mortal gather, his chief duty is to create an ideal climate in which he and his fellow men can live."

Dr. J. Warren Hastings, preaching at National City Christian Church, said that God is actively interested in America's progress.

"The 'upward calling of God' is being heard by myriads of our people today, and they are determined to do something about the present deplorable situation.

"God yearns to use this Nation today in stressing the principals of permanent peace, justice, decency, unselfishness, righteousness and truth before the tribunals of the world."

Epidemic Takes 14th Infant At Freedmen's

The fourteenth victim of a diarrhea epidemic at Freedmen's Hospital died yesterday afternoon. Ten other infants are still ill. One is listed by the hospital as in "serious condition."

The latest victim in the wave of infant deaths was Mildred Hamilton, aged 18 days, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton of 4103 Hayes st. ne. She first showed symptoms three days after birth and had been under treatment since.

The Washington Urban League and the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, last week asked Watson R. Miller, administrator of the Federal Security Agency, to provide more adequate care for the infants and to investigate the conditions which resulted in their deaths.

Veteran Quiz Set Despite Withdrawals

The withdrawal of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars from a Woman's National Press Club luncheon panel on veterans to be held today has "made no change at all in our plans," Mrs. Christine Sadler Coe, club guest chairman, said last night.

The two veterans' groups declined to participate because of the presence of an American Veterans Committee representative, she said. Representatives of the two major World War I organizations had accepted previously, but last week they changed their minds, Mrs. Coe explained.

Housing Administrator Wilson W. Wyatt and United States Employment Director Robert C. Goodwin will answer "What are we doing for the veterans?" at panel to be held at 1 p. m. in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine, Reemployment and Retraining administrator, will act as moderator. Questions will be aimed at the two Government officials by Willard Rice, public relations officer of the Disabled American Veterans; James Tate or Robert McLaughlin of Amvets, and Chat Patterson, legislative representative of the American Veterans' Committee.

Mrs. Alice Rogers Hager, president of the press club, will introduce the speakers and moderator. About 150 to to 200 persons are expected to attend.

Bar Association to Meet

Proposed legislation to increase by three the number of Municipal Court judges will be discussed at a District Bar Association meeting scheluled for 8 p. m. today at Hotel Mayflower.

Thieves Loot A.M.E. Church Of Furniture

Burglars and robbers with distorted ideas of values romped off with some church furniture, a portable bar, two pair of trousers and a sauce pan over the weekend.

Value of articles stolen and amount of cash taken in a series of at least 10 house-breakings and holdups totaled about $1000, police said last night.

Navy Lieut. (jg) Robert F. Turner, 2006 G st. nw., lost two pair of trousers and $36 and the A. M. E. Church at Stanton and Douglas rds. lost three pieces of matching maple furniture.

Thieves got the sauce pan, an electric fan, portable bar, radios and other articles from the show window of the New York Jewelry Co., 719 7th st. nw.

Three juveniles, unmindful of the meat shortage, broke into the Brown Slaughter House, 1100 Maryland ave. sw., and made off with an undetermined amount of pennies.

Two cab drivers and a lone, early-morning pedestrian were set upon and robbed of cash totaling $30 and the George Plakias restaurant, 236 3rd st. sw., lost cash, 26 cartons of cigarets, a fountain pen and a wrist watch valued at $328.

Postlude

Recital at Phillips Gallery Honors Mrs. Roberts' Memory

By Ray C. B. Brown

(The following is the final Postlude by Ray C. B. Brown to appear in The Post. He is retiring and will devote his time to writing and rest.)

Friends of the late Fanny Amstutz Roberts assembled in Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon to hear a memorial recital of Schubert's lieder cycle, "Die Winterreise," sung by Doda Conrad with Charles Henderson as assisting pianist. The choice of this lyric work, seldom performed in its entirety, was doubly appropriate because of the elegiac quality predominant in many of the songs, and because Mrs. Roberts had planned before her passing to have the Polish-American basso present the cycle under the auspices of the Washington College of Music, of which she was the president

"Die Winterreise" is one of the perfect examples of romanticism in its flowering period. Wilhelm Mueller's poems are saturated with the tears of unrequited affection, gusty with the sighs of lovesickness, and permeated with the melancholy and the despair that Goethe's Werther had made the inevitable state of any well-behaved lover whose hopes had been blasted. Schubert had known enough disappointment in love to compose precisely the right kind of music for such a tragedy of the emotions. The texts and the music are completely fused, and the effect upon contemporary listeners must have been overwhelming. To modern ears the cycle is musically lovely, but emotionally overwrought, and saved from anticlimax only by the unconscious humor inherent in many of the extravagant verbal images.

Conrad read the cycle with a sincerity that had its moving force. His reading was the more effective because his voice intoned with a rude vigor passages that would have been weakened by saccharine smoothness and sentimental languors. The recital will be repeated tonight for other auditors who remember Mrs. Roberts with the affection associated with her character.

At the National Gallery of Art last evening, Francis Tursi and his sister, Rosalie Gassel, played a very enjoyable recital of works for viola and piano. Tursi, who was last heard here while he was a member of the Navy Band Orchestra, is a talented young musician whose potentialities as an interpreter are expanding. He draws a beautiful tone that is never pressed into raucousness; he has a skill that is always subservient to his artistic instinct, and his fine taste keeps his virtuosity from the danger of showiness.

His program began with a Sonata in A major by Boccherini, presumably transposed from one of the violoncello sonatas. Boccherini is unjustly placed below Haydn whose equal he is in melodic invention, ingenuity of ideas and inexhaustible flow of geniality. Next came the Sonata in E flat major which Brahms originally designed for clarinet and allowed the viola to take over. Its quality is pastoral when the clarinet has the voicing, but this changes markedly in the viola reading which is more persuasive in a purely lyrical way without any connotation of rusticity.

There was a first local performance of a Sonata in D minor written in 1934 by the English composer, Arthur Bliss, who has proceeded from a willful eccentricity to serious musicianship. The sonata is spacious design, imaginative, fanciful in a neo-romantic manner and virtuosic in its demands upon the performer. The ideational content is rich, and the music has a rewarding eloquence in its moods. The most attractive movement is the brooding Andante which has a Keltic flavor and a sense of poetic mystery.

Park Robber Uses Girl Decoy To Take $85 From Lieutenant

Lieut. Kenneth Sentner, Fort Meade, fell victim to a park robber who used a girl as a decoy early yesterday morning and gave up $85, he told police. Last month, he lost $22 to an intruder who entered his hotel room and lifted the money from his trousers while he slept.

The $85 incident came during an early morning stroll through Farragut Square when he saw a girl appealing for help. When he went to her aid, a man stepped from the shrubbery with a gun. The girl leaped up, took Sentner's billfold and fled with her accomplice.

Eastern Shares Indies Facilities Of Pan American

An agreement between Pan American World Airways and Eastern Airlines, Inc., will give Eastern the use of Pan American facilities between Miami, Fla., and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The contract, announced yesterday, will allow Eastern to begin operations competitive to Pan American over the route.

Pan American entered the contract, described as "an equitable arrangement satisfactory to both parties," in accordance with the company policy of extending use of its facilities on a basis of cost-sharing.

As a result of permission to use established facilities, Eastern is able to gain immediate approval of operating specifications from the Civil Aeronautics Board.

White House Posts Still Held Hazard

Now take those bulky twin gateposts at West Executive and Pennsylvania Avenues, between White House and State Department...

Nearly two decades ago the halls of Congress were reverberating with demands to "take 'em out" and now the fight is beginning all over, because the broad, 10-foot posts are still traffic hazards, only more so.

"Sooner or later someone will be killed there because the posts obstruct the view of a man driving and if there are people walking on the sidewalk in that square you cannot even see traffic coming down the Avenue."

That quotation is still valid today, though it was made back in January, 1928, before a House committee considering a bill proposing donation of the gates to a State park in Ohio. The speaker was Representative Daniel A. Reed, of New York, and his view was seconded by David Lynn, who was and still is Architect of the Capitol.

Several months earlier Congress had authorized removal of the West Executive ave. gates, but only on condition that the heavy stone posts to which they were attached should not be disturbed.

Examination yesterday of old congressional hearing reports revealed that it was the then Senator Wesley Jones (R., Wash.) who was responsible for the don't-touch-the-posts amendment. As reported out by the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, the bill would have eliminated the posts as well as the gate.

The report on H. R. 54 said:

"The piers (posts) and gates standing at the head of West Executive ave. have long been a serious impediment to traffic and are a constant source of danger, both to vehicles and pedestrians. They are of no material service because when desired to close temporarily West Executive ave. for any purpose this can be done by roping off or policing."

The hearing report reveals that the gateposts were first recognized as a traffic hazard shortly after Warren G. Harding's inauguration. He agreed to their removal but it was not until Coolidge's administration that the gates were taken off—with the posts remaining.

West Executive ave, closed to the public since Pearl Harbor, is due to be restored to traffic in the next few weeks and, with Washington traffic at its heaviest, District authorities are fearful that it won't be long until an auto runs into one of the posts. Or a pedestrian, failing to peek-a-boo around the stanchions as he crosses West Executive ave., is struck by a car.

Film Blaze Takes Life of Second Man

An amateur movie operator died yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital of burns suffered 10 days ago when film he was using burst into flame.

The victim—second one to die of burns suffered in the fire—was William K. Phillips, 28, of 2021½ 4th st. nw. The first man to die of burns was Booker T. Jay, 35, of the 4th st. address.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said his office had started an investigation and was awaiting a report from the police homicide squad before issuing a certificate.

According to Capt. Roy Warfield, deputy fire marshal, the two men purchased five cases of 35 millimeter nitrocellulose film from the Ben Lust Theater Supply Co., 1001 New Jersey ave. nw. A week following the fire, Lust was arrested on charges of selling nitrocellulose film to an unlicensed party and selling it without a license. Booked at Second Precinct station, Lust forfeited collateral totaling $325.

Two Navy Officers Here Are Awarded Legion of Merit

Presentation of the Legion of Merit to two Washington area naval officers was announced yesterday by Navy Secretary James Forrestal.

Those honored were Capt. Beauford Wallace Fink, USN, whose wife lives at 2801 Cortland pl. nw., and Ensign Frank Clark White, whose wife lives at 4652 South 34th st., Arlington.

Captain Fink received the award for service as assistant director of the construction department, Bureau of Yards and Docks, from February, 1942, to October, 1943. He was cited for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the United States."

The award went to Ensign White for outstanding service to the Government in the field of communications and electronics. He was cited for his distribution of equipment to combat areas.

AVC's Chairman To Open Member Campaign Tonight

Charles G. Bolte, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee, will be the principal speaker tonight as the organization launches a national membership drive.

Bolte will speak at a dinner meeting to be held at 7:15 p. m. in the Congressional Room of the Willard Hotel. His address will be broadcast nationally at 9:30 p. m.

Other speakers will include Mrs. Raymond Clapper, wife of the late columnist; Kermit Eby of the CIO, and Peter Henle of the AFL, Wilbur S. Finch, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and Col. Campbell Johnson, assistant to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Would you please tell me how to clean an iron? My new iron is burned on the tip and picked up fuzz from linen and is not smooth any more. D. E. L.

The best way to clean an iron is to rub it with a cloth dipped in drycleaning fluid. Do it while the iron is cold. To keep the iron smooth rub the bottom occasionally with wax or paraffin.

I have a numdah rug with a white background. I have tried sending it to the cleaners, but they did a poor job. I cleaned it once with synthetic suds with some success, but the blues in the design faded to lavender. Can I wash this rug in a washing machine? Is there any way to restore the blue color? D. K.

Professional shampooing or cleaning is the safest procedure for rugs of this type. You've already demonstrated that the color will fade when washed but you could wash it in the washing machine with very little color change if you're careful. Use tepid water and mild soap and a short washing time. There is no way to restore the blue color that faded in the first washing.

I have two pairs of originally expensive table lamps. All four shades are soiled. I tried sponging them with dry cleaner to no avail. The shades are covered in thin rayon material and are quite fragile. Do you think I could wash them in soapsuds safely, and if so, how? How can I rid a closet of buffalo moths? I have no way of sealing it up, and in addition I'm afraid to use a D.D.T. spray since I must put my baby to sleep in the same room.

1. The lamp shades can be shampooed or dipped in cleaning fluid, provided the fabric is sewed to the frame. You can buy dry cleaning fluid and dip the shades in it or you can use soapsuds.

Make a thick suds of mild soap and warm water and dip the shades up and down several times. Now dip them in several rinse waters of lukewarm water and dry as rapidly as possible without artificial heat. An electric fan will aid drying. Turn the shades several times during the drying process to avoid streaking.

2. The only way to get rid of the moths is to fumigate the closet and that means it must be sealed for a while. The sealing can be done with fumigator's tape. Here's how to go about it:

Sprinkle the closet liberally with paradichlorobenzene or napthalene crystals—be sure every crack is covered. Then close the closet and seal it with fumigator's tape. Remember that the crystals must vaporize before a complete kill is effected. Sometimes this takes as long as two weeks and in the meantime the moths can have a happy holiday in the clothes.

If you have a vacuum cleaner with a vaporizer attachment the job will be easier. Put ½ pound of para crystals in the vacuum attachment. Let the cord come out under the closet door and seal the closet with fumigator's tape. Turn on the motor and let it run for 1½ hours. Remove the cleaner quickly and reseal the closet at once. A complete kill should be effected in 72 hours and you can unseal the closet and use it again. You can buy electric vaporizers for this purpose but they aren't as efficient as the vacuum cleaner.

If you don't have such a vacuum, spray the closet thoroughly with insecticide, pack it with para crystals and seal the closet. The baby will be safe so long as the closet is sealed and it must be if you're going to get rid of the moths.

Happy in Her Choice of Husband, an Amputee, Whose Postwar Record Is a Success Story, Girl Asks How to Cope With Family's Prejudice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago I met a double amputee at the hospital where I did volunteer work and a year ago we were married. I was 21 then and my husband 24. However, my family was bitterly opposed to our marriage. They said I was starting marriage with two strikes on it, that Bill's future was insecure and I was risking too much.

I haven't noticed that our marriage is not working. Bill has just been made a junior partner in his firm and we have bought a new car and a house. We are expecting a baby in October and are delighted about it. We are really happy together. In spite of all this, my family seems determined to break up our marriage.

They make a point of offering Bill pity and trying to help him too much, which he doesn't need or want. The other day my sister and her fiance came to call and Janet made a point of telling Jack that she always has to be very careful of what she says to Bill—"because he is so sensitive."

Family Needles With Solicitude

ALTHOUGH he dislikes pity, he isn't overly sensitive about being an amputee. If anyone is, I am,—because I am conscious of every remark my family makes about Bill, who is the most courageous person I've ever known and I hate hearing them criticize and pity him. I have wondered if maybe I've misunderstood their attitude; if maybe they really think they are being kind.

Before my husband left the hospital he had learned to drive a car, to walk and dance and generally get around as well as the next fellow. And of course he has the same thoughts, feelings and aspirations that all persons of fine character do. I love him more because he has had to develop more courage and stamina than life requires of the nonamputee.

There has to be some sort of showdown with my family. If they are trying to help, they should be made to understand the error of their ways. And if they are trying to hinder, they must be made to stop it. Please help me. M. S.

Family's Trying To End Marriage

DEAR M. S.: It is neither Bill nor you, but your family, who is sensitive to his being a double amputee. Their attitude amounts to projecting the theory that this is something to be ashamed of,—and as a result of their distorted vision, they aren't seeing Bill as himself at all, in the common sense way that you do.

They aren't trying to be kind in showing pity, making superfluous offers of unwanted help and imputing touchy self-consciousness to Bill. Rather they are being delicately malicious, in the hope (perhaps not consciously realized) of breaking up the love match,—which from their viewpoint seems so "unsuitable."

The fact that Bill's postwar record has already assumed success-story proportions is proof enough that he feels perfectly sure of himself in any situation that gives him normal breaks,—and if your family's attitude gets under his skin, well, that's natural, too. What nice person wouldn't react uncomfortably to hostile deprecation, piously masked?

According to specialist definition, Bill is definitely one of the better oriented war veterans. Dr. Tamara Delmo of Stanford University, now doing a research study—begun by the Army,—into amputees' psychological reactions to civilian society, finds there are two major types of character-reaction.

Specialist Lore Is Needed Here

TAKING the field of amputees as a whole, there is one group who want special consideration, feel they have earned it and would be indignant if a helping hand were not extended in certain circumstances,—say, to illustrate, if trying to negotiate a stairway with a suitcase to carry.

The other group,—called better oriented by the specialists,—tends to be independent, resourceful and casual about mastering prosthetic equipment. Which, of course, is Bill's philosophy,—and the reason why both of you deplore your family's attitude.

Since specialists defer to Dr. Delmo's scholarship and judgment, in the matter of educating the public to intelligent treatment of amputee veterans, my advice is to write her,—in care of the Department of Psychology, Stanford University, Calif.,—for specific suggestions on how to cope with your problem-family. M. H.

Biscuit Purses Don't Jingle With Pennies, But They're Bursting With Pride Just the Same

BURSTING WITH PRIDE are the plump pasties. They've a right to, because little meat has been used to make them

Flaky biscuit purses nearly burst with pride these days because they can coax one cup of meat over a long, flavorful route. Almost any meat will do. These purse-like pasties hold the riches of vitamins B and the iron of enriched flour, as well as its energy-yielding carbohydrates and body-building proteins. The tomato soup with which they are moistened adds flavor and juiciness.

So if you have one cup of left over meat or can buy such meat as a half pound of hamburger, you'll have sufficient meat to make a dinner dish that is full of good flavor and nutrition.

You'll have a platterful of eye-appealing food if you serve the purses on a platter with golden carrot slices and tender lima beans, accented with sprigs of watercress.

DINNER MENU

Meat Pasties
Carrots Lima Beans
Tossed Vegetable Salad
Boysen Berries with Cream
Molasses Crinkles Coffee

Here's the recipe by which a small amount of meat can be extended to a main dish:

MEAT PASTIES

Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add two-thirds to three-fourths cup milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently for one-half minute. Roll out to rectangle one-eighth inch thick. Brush with melted shortening. Cut into three-inch squares. Place 1 tablespoon meat mixture on one-half of each square. Fold other half over meat and press edges together with tines of fork. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce. Yield, about eight, three-inch pasties.

Meat Filling

Mix 1 cup ground hamburger, (½ pound) or other meat with ¾ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Brown with 1 tablespoon margarine or butter in hot skillet, stirring frequently with fork. When meat mixture is browned, add ½ cup condensed tomato soup. Mix well.

MOLASSES CRINKLES

Molasses Crinkles are thick and chewy cookies with crackled tops. Make them this way:

Preheat oven to 375 degrees—moderately hot. Sift flour to make 2¼ cupfuls. Resift flour with ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons soda, ½ teaspoon cloves and 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger. Cream ¾ cup shortening and add 1 cup brown sugar gradually, then cream thoroughly. Beat 1 egg well, blend into creamed mixture and then add 4 tablespoons molasses. Stir in sifted dry ingredients. Shape into balls the size of walnuts and dip tops in sugar. Bake 12 to 15 minutes. Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

Crunchy Almonds

The California almond crop is reported as pushing hard on the 40,000 ton mark to set an all-time high. Consumers may look for lower prices and a very superior quality nut. Use almonds in salads, on top of ice cream and slivered and toasted for giving a crunchy note to fish.

Teen Time Is High Time to Improve

You can't put off your education until you're 40 and make your mark in the world. Neither can you put off making the most of your appearance until you suddenly discover you've been a back number so long it's too late to change.

Teen-agers can take themselves in hand while their beauty is young and pliable. Now's the time to plan a program for figure, face and grooming

Bending over books, sitting at desks and carrying books creates posture problems for school girls. Exercise will correct round shoulders and other posture defects.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

POPULAR Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who tops her Latin chic by mauve-tinting her naturally wavey, white hair, has returned to Washington after almost a year in Argentina. Her annual stay in her homeland was prolonged this time by the duties of settling her mother's estate. Senora de Bruyn, a grande dame of the old school and a "character" in her own right, was well-known in Washington, where she visited Mrs. Robbins.

After riding the range on a "small" estancia of about 20,000 acres, Mrs. Robbins looks extremely fit and able to cope with a Washington winter. Her descriptions of Argentina make me ready to swap Washington for it any day.

In Argentina the soil is so rich that you just throw down a handful of seed and it springs up, spreads all over the landscape and bears a crop that would stagger any victory gardener.

Even trees, grow like mad. So much so that the acorn you plant as a child shelters your old age and must be replanted by your children. None of this personally holding up your garden's one sapling during each windstorm so it won't lie flat down! (A tree-growing technique I've developed in Georgetown.)

HOWEVER, Georgetown trees do bear leaves and this is the raking season. I eavesdropped the other day on a little girl who had been set such a task, while she spoke severely to her younger sister.

"Mummie did NOT say you needn't rake," she reprimanded, "she only said, 'I think you'd be better off without her!'"

TO GO back to Argentina, a shorter trip by typewriter than by plane—Count and Countess Robert van der Straten-Pontoz, who have so many friends in Washington dating back to his tour of duty here as Belgian Ambassador, are living on their estancia in Argentina.

This summer saw their first family reunion since the war with the arrival in Argentina of their elder daughter from Belgium. Betty van der Straten and Charlie van der Straten both married in Argentina and live there.

THERE is a new bride at the French Embassy. On August 31 Second Secretary Pierre Dupont was married to titian-haired Frances Smith of Toronto, Canada, in St. Matthew's Cathedral. They met in the Capital where she has been doing a war job with the British Air Commission.

M. Dupont was for a number of years French Consul General in New Orleans where he was extremely popular. No Mardi Gras party in the French-loving carnival city was complete without him.

I can't think of a single member of the French Embassy here who doesn't speak good English and M. Dupont's is among the best. That fact probably helped along his courtship because his bride doesn't speak French fluently. However, it was her favorite subject in school, and from now on it's her vocation.

I HEAR that the Snowden Fahnestocks have bought a house in Nassau. They will winter there and summer in Newport with stops in Washington en route. It seems a life not hard to take, except that they will be badly missed in the Capital. In Washington the Fahnestocks will stop with Mrs. Fahnestock's mother, Mrs. James M. Beck.

Daughter to Parks

Mr. and Mrs. Rickard W. Parks, jr., announce the birth of a daughter, Glenn Leigh, at Alexandria Hospital on September 11. Mrs. Parks is the former Glenn Munnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Munnie of Arlington.

McLeans Visiting Mother

John R. McLean, Dallas, Tex., and Edward B. McLean, jr., Colorado Springs, Colo., are guests at the Mayflower Hotel, having come to Washington a few days ago to visit their mother, Mrs. Edward B. McLean, who is in a hospital suffering from a broken kneecap.

Belgian Elected Jesuit Head In Centuries-Old Ceremony

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Very Rev. John Baptist Janssens, Jesuit provincial for north Belgium, was unanimously elected general of the Society of Jesus (Order of Jesuits) today in a solemn, centuries-old ceremony.

Father Janssens succeeds the Very Rev. Vladimir Ledochowski, who served the Roman Catholic order as general for 27 years until his death in Rome December 13, 1942. The war had prevented delegates from the society's 43 provinces in all parts of the world from gathering to elect a new leader.

Black-robed delegates from the United States and 32 other countries gathered early in the day in the church of the General House, dedicated to St. Francis Borgia, third general of the order.

In Brussels, the tall, spare Father Janssens was described as an austere, exact man who pinpointed Allied advances during the war on his big atlas and skilfully guided visiting Gestapo agents away from underground workers' secrets.

One proud associate in the big convent in the center of Brussels said:

"You should have seen him when the Gestapo came here. 'The dignity of his reception, and how he managed to show them around where he wanted them to go, but nowhere else!'

"As many of our members were joining underground action, he knew many dangerous secrets, but never did the Gestapo find ay," he added.

Results of the election were communicated immediately to Pope Pius XII, who is the supreme authority of the society.

Father Janssens is the twenty-seventh general since the order was founded in 1540 by the Spanish saint, Ignatius Loyola.

Father Janssens speaks Flemish, French, German, English, Italian and Spanish. Born December 22, 1889, at Malines, Belgium, he entered the society in 1907 as a novice at the novitiate at Tronchiennes. He entered the College of Theology and Philosophy at Louvain in 1909, and from 1911 to 1914 studied civil law at the Catholic University of Louvain.

From 1915 to 1917 he taught classical studies at the Jesuit College in Antwerp and from 1917 to 1920 studied at Louvain.

He was ordained a priest in 1919. In 1922-23 he took his biennium in canon law at the Gregorian University in Rome. From 1923 to 1929 he was a professor in Louvain, and he became rector there in 1929, serving until 1935. Before his appointment as North Belgian Provincial in 1938, he served as instructor of the Tertian Fathers at Tronchiennes.

During the next few years the general congregation will elect assistants for the order's provinces in various parts of the world.

The Jesuits are famed throughout the world as missionaries and educators. Particularly in the United States the fathers of the order are noted in the field of education. They have been conspicuous in astronomy and geophysics and in seismographic studies at Georgetown and Fordham Universities, as well as in Cleveland, Weston, Mass., and St. Louis.

Major Callahan Will Attend Police Meeting

Maj. Harvey G. Callahan, Superintendent of Police, will leave Thursday for Mexico City to attend the fifty-third annual conference of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Postwar problems of crime, traffic and juvenile delinquency will be discussed by the 1000 delegates from the United States, Mexico, Canada, Central and South America, who are expected to attend the conference.

Speakers will include Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, and general chairman of the President's Highway Safety Conference; Brig. Gen. Ramon Jiminez Delgado, chief of the Federal District Police, Mexico City; Frank J. Wilson, chief, United States Secret Service; Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the FBI.

Stock Investments

By Roger W. Babson

Three Factors to Study

We hear much about stock market "averages"—especially the Dow-Jones Industrial Averages which are pretty much the standard. This average was 381 early in 1929; it fell to 41 in 1932; since then it has gradually crawled back (with a break in 1937) to 212, a high in May, 1946. Since then there has been a decline, so that the average today is about 172.

In addition to watching these averages, many investors are believers in the "Dow Theory" so-called. This is that a change in the cyclical trend of the market is indicated when there is confirmation in the individual price movements of the industrial group and the railroad group of stocks. Such a change of trend is said to have taken place when both groups break through an earlier fairly recent top or bottom of the group's averages.

My own opinion is that in the years ahead, between now and World War III, much less attention will be given to these or any other averages. They will mean much less in the future than in the past. As for the Dow Theory, I believe this has fulfilled its usefulness and we will hear much less about it from now on.

Nothing in sight suggests there will be any less idle money to invest during the next few years even though more securities are being issued. Therefore, the buying demand should exceed the desire to sell; in fact, many of those who sell will ultimately reinvest in something else. People may change their investments from stocks to other forms of securities, or may put the money into houses, automobiles or other things. The money, however, will continue to exist in someone's pocket or bank account.

My own guess is that we are facing a very selective market. As the international situation becomes more intense, wise investors will sell securities of corporations which have most of their assets in large United States cities which will probably be destroyed if World War III occurs. Then they will seek out companies which have their assets well distributed throughout the country mostly away from large cities.

Investment counselors and investment trusts are already busy seeking out such corporations and switching their funds accordingly. This probably explains why stocks like Greyhound, General American Tank Car, Corn Products, Diamond Match, St. Joe Lead, United Fruit and certain oils and sulphurs have gone up above the averages; while stocks like the railroads have lagged. Surely, the stocks of certain chain store companies with their merchandise distributed among hundreds of small communities throughout the Central West or South should be safer investments than the stocks of a large department store in some big coastal city.

As these investment counselors get under way in their studies, their clients will create a buying power which may well cause much higher prices in so-called "war-proof" stocks, and much lower prices in "war-vulnerable" stocks. How this will affect the averages, no one can now tell. These investment counselors will also again give much consideration to the effects of inflation upon securities. If World War III comes, it cannot help being followed by wild and uncontrolled inflation.

There also is one other consideration which is already making this a selective market. I refer to labor demands. Wise investors are selecting stocks which employ a comparatively small amount of labor. Hence, the ideal investment is one which would fulfill these three requirements:

(1) A company with most of its assets outside of large, vulnerable cities.

(2) A company which would not suffer from severe inflation.

(3) A company which has a comparatively small labor cost.

To me, the merchandising chains, operating in the Middle West, best fulfill these three conditions and in such I, personally, have considerable money.

Barter Theater Tour Brings Unique Group To Northern Virginia

By Richard L. Coe

NEXT WEEK WILL find Virginia's famed Barter Theater at the gates of Washington. The Abingdon players will not be crossing the Potomac, however.

The first State-wide tour of a State-subsidized theater in this country will start a week from tonight in Fredericksburg with "State of the Union," the Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse Pulitzer Prize winner which is still a top grosser on Broadway. On Thursday the 26th they will be playing "Much Ado About Nothing" in Alexandria.

Libby Holman

The tour is being sponsored by civic organizations in the various towns visited. Tickets are being handled through them. The Lions Club of Fredericksburg is sponsoring "State of the Union" and the American Association of University Women of Alexandria is sponsoring the Shakespearian comedy. Announcements as to the sale of tickets will be made by these organizations. The Barter's Washington representative is Miss June Garner, 1277 New Hampshire ave., DI. 8621.

This brings to a realization Robert Porterfield's long dream of converting his summer stock company into a year-round repertory operation. The tour will operate from a succession of regional bases with two separate companies which will merge into a third on alternate weeks. The full company of 35 actors, directors and technicians has been drawn from the group of a hundred which put on the summer season at Abingdon. All are professionals and are working at standard equity salaries.

Wind-Up In New York

The tour will last until spring and will dip into 12 Southern States. Porterfield hopes to wind up this first year of traveling with a two-week run in New York before settling down again for the summer in Abingdon.

Here is the schedule for the first week of the tour, with the sponsoring organizations involved:

is playing this half-hour drama, but the organization has calls for more performances than it can handle. Hence a tryout call

Yes, barter will be accepted for admission, but both players and sponsors hope you'll pay the $1.20 in cash. Barter on the road would be a little too much to cope with.

To the list of summer theater tryouts that are blossoming into winter vehicles, add Libby Holman's "The Best of Friends." Andrew Rosenthal did the book, music and lyrics for this intimate musical about two ladies who both decide to poison the other. Since one is a man's wife and the other his mistress, their reasoning seems understandable. Jules J. Leventhal and John Huntington are producing and there's a possibility E street may see it during a ten-week pre-New York tour. But you know those possibilities.

Casting time is here in earnest. Unique is the "Stage for Action" group's call for a second company of Arthur Miller's "You're Next," concerning "the position of the liberal in America today." One company already for tonight at 8 at 3117 Pennsylvania ave.

Medicated Matron

"TEN DROPS," one of the less pleasant characters of "It Happened at the Inn," the French comedy now at the Little, is played by Germain Kerjean

The Pentagon Players is a new group growing up you know where. This club, under the direction of Lieut. Col. Fielder P. Greer, is holding tryouts tonight at 7 in Room 2E240, the Pentagon Building. Col. Greer is a West Pointer whose hobby is theater and he should prove an interesting disciplinarian as a director. The first play will be "Three Men on a Horse."

And, to complete the night's tryout listings, don't forget 8 o'clock also is the time set for casting by the St. Paul Players, Howard Wentworth, director. The Y. W. C. A., 17th and K sts., is the place.

Over in Falls Church, the Community Theater is rehearsing in "Laura," which seems to be that Miriam Hopkins vehicle which was here a few months ago. Eleanor Timmis is directing, assisted by Hope Anderson. The ladies' production will be one of the first of the mystery since it was released for nonprofessional performance.

TONIGHT'S OPENING: "The Temporary Mrs. Smith" begins a week's run at the National before its New York opening. Francine Larrimore is the star of a company that includes the screen's Mischa Auer, Millard Mitchell and Fania Marinoff.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Sept. 15.—Brig. Gen. Rosey O'Donnell, the West Point football star who led the B-29 raids over Tokyo, has just been made Director of Information for the United States Army Air Forces. His principal assignment will be to campaign for the unification of all the armed forces . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., will participate in the New York State campaign this fall by making three speeches against Tom Dewey . . . Former Ambassador William C. Bullitt is in New York to enter a hospital. Bullitt will be operated upon to correct an injury suffered in Europe last year, when the jeep in which he was riding was overturned.

William C. Bullitt

Ed Stettinius is planning to write a book about the 18-month period when both Hull and Roosevelt were on the decline. The former Secretary of State will offer proof that Roosevelt, in his negotiations with the Russians, drove a hard bargain at all times . . . Jim Farley left New York so quickly that he didn't have time to get the inoculations needed for his trip to China. Farley will get the inoculations in London . . . Every writer whose plays are being produced by the Equity Library Theater waived his royalties. Only twice have royalties been paid—both times to the estate of James M. Barrie—at the rate of $37.50 a performance.

Jackie Gleason, the comedian who has been busy substituting for ailing night-club stars while awaiting the beginning of his film career with Twentieth Century-Fox, is only 30 years old. He started in the Broadway sector by joining the Jack White team at the 18 Club. There he became accustomed to such sights as Nelson Eddy taking the floor and trying to sing while White tore his wing-collar, poured ice cubes into his pocket and played tick-tack-toe on his shirt front . . . His most memorable experience was in being heckled by a ringsider at a Jersey night club. Gleason invited the heckler outside, and when he later was revived he learned that the heckler who had accepted his challenge was a bartender-prize-fighter, Tony Galento.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

FRIENDS of Secretary of State Byrnes have received word that he may have to resign shortly after the end of the Paris Peace Conference—not because of the Wallace speech blow-up, but for reasons of health.

Byrnes' doctors have told him that he might be able to continue as Secretary of State provided he took long anti periodic rests. However, Byrnes does not believe he should do this.

Byrnes, however, has told intimates that conducting the foreign affairs of the United States today is a constant, day-to-day job. He does not feel that a Secretary of State can be off the job a minute, and he does not believe it would be fair to the American people for him to take a prolonged rest.

For instance, immediately after the Paris Peace Conference is to be the Assembly of the United Nations, now already late. After that comes the Pan American Security Conference to be held in Rio de Janeiro, also late. Following that comes the regular Pan American Conference, to say nothing of various meetings of the United Nations Security Council.

Best State Secretary

BYRNES has been hopping back and forth across the Atlantic ever since he became Secretary of State. In 15 months he has made seven round trips.

In Paris, Byrnes has worked at a terrific pace. Sitting in the Peace Conference all day, keeping on the alert to watch the moves of rival delegates, is a gruelling job. It would wear out a younger man. But by going to bed every night immediately after dinner, Byrnes has kept going.

However, he is no longer young—66—and when the Peace Conference closes he will have to decide whether to follow his doctors' advice and resign, or face eventualities.

Note—This observer, who has covered the State Department as a newspaperman since the Coolidge Administration, believes Byrnes is doing about the most effective job under the most difficult circumstances of any Secretary of State since Charles Evans Hughes.

Phony Newsmen

SECRET Service still has under surveillance in Bermuda a weird young couple who crashed the Truman vacation party posing as reporters for Life magazine.

The couple, a man of about 25 and a sexy brunette posing as his wife, asked copious, foolish questions of Press Secretary Charlie Ross, wanted exclusive photos of the President, finally gave themselves away by asking the naval officer in charge of radioing press copy to let them read all the dispatches previously sent by the 23 other newsmen.

The naval officer let the couple read the dispatches—though he had no business to do so. This aroused newspaper suspicion and started an eventual investigation. Finally Secret Service arrested the couple, found they were traveling under phony names, were living out of wedlock in a $35 a day suite in Bermuda, had never done any newspaper work. They are still being watched in Bermuda.

Capital Chaff

ANYONE who knew General Eisenhower's mother had no difficulty understanding how she raised a great son. As a matter of fact she raised five sons and played no favorites. She was equally proud of them all. When Sam Goldwyn of Hollywood, now planning a picture on Eisenhower, told his mother, "You must be very proud of your son," she replied: "Which son?" . . . Eisenhower's brothers include the president of Kansas State College, Milton S. Eisenhower . . . Despite the razzing he got at Carruthersville, Mo., last year, President Truman's friends say he will visit the Carruthersville County Fair again this year. It will be his thirteenth consecutive appearance. Nobody can say that when it comes to Missouri, Mr. Truman isn't consistent.

Every Third Marriage Failed in '46

By the Associated Press

One American family broke up for every three, approximately, that were formed last year, the Federal Security Agency reported last night.

More than 502,000 marriages ended in divorce courts in 1945, an all-time record representing a 25.5 per cent rise over the previous peak divorce year, 1944.

The divorces were 31 per cent of the marriages, which totalled 1,618,331 last year, or about 8.7 per cent below Cupid's biggest year, 1942.

FSA's study, the first Federal reporting of divorce statistics, generally steers clear of interpretation save to show that both marriage and divorce rates rise with prosperity, wartime or otherwise, and fall with depression.

For lonely hearts there are few clews except this: The marriage rate is consistently higher in the West and South than in the rest of the country.

The divorce rate has already doubled in nine years, FSA reported. Fairly steady at 1.9 divorces per 1000 population in 1937-39, it climbed to 3.6 in 1945. The ratio of divorce to marriage also soared from 17.8 divorces per 100 marriages to the 1945 total of 31 divorces per 100 marriages.

In the depression the marriage rate fell to an unprecedented low of 7.9 per 1000 in 1932.

The wartime marriage peak came in 1942, when 1,772,132 couples went to the altar.

What's wrong with you, Jane? Cat got your tongue?
I'm afraid that's the trouble. I've been practicing on my trumpet for two years and I'm afraid it's all I'll ever be able to do.
Don't be a fool. I'll bet you're a little excited. Nothing to worry about. Just relax and blow.
Pardon me, Miss, but I'm half the band. Don't mind us.

I STILL SAY OUR BEST BET IS TO FLY IT BEFORE THEY GET TO LOS ANGELES --WHILE WE CAN USE THE CAB FOR A GET-AWAY!
OKAY! LET'S GO OVER IT AGAIN!
ARE YOU SURE ALL THE TRAINS FROM HERE TO L.A., STOP AT FUNGUS VALLEY?
YES! TO PICK UP FRUIT THAT'S BEIN' SHIPPED BY EXPRESS. I CHECKED ON IT!
AND YOU'RE SURE THERE'S NO COPS IN THAT TOWN?
IT AIN'T EVEN A TOWN!--JUST THE STATION AND A COUPLE OF SHACKS! I GAVE IT A GOOD LOOK COMING DOWN!
WE'D BETTER GIVE IT ANOTHER GOOD LOOK--RIGHT NOW--TONIGHT!
YEAH!--WE CAN BE UP THERE INSIDE OF AN HOUR!

DIXIE DUGAN

YOU SET FIRE TO MR. LAFTON'S ESTATE!
WHY WOULD I DO THAT?
YOU ADMITTED YOU DIDN'T LIKE HIM! WHAT WERE YOU DOING THE NIGHT OF THIS FIRE?
I--I HADDA DATE WITH THE COOK--WHEN WE CAME BACK WE SAW TH' PLACE IN FLAMES--
BELIEVE ME, SIR, I MAY HAVE WISHED MR. LAFTON IN A LOT OF PLACES BUT CERTAINLY I WOULDN'T SET FIRE TO HIS PLACE TO PUT HIM THERE!
GET OUTTA HERE! BRING IN TH' COOK!
GIT!

CHIEF WAHOO and STEVE ROPER

THIS MUST BE A DREAM, SONNY! I BET I'LL WAKE UP IN MIKE'S BARBER SHOP AND FIND I'VE FALLEN ASLEEP, LOOKIN' AT YOUR PICTURE IN THE PAPER!
YA PICKED A LIVE WIRE, SNAPPER!--- CUPCAKE'S ALREADY GOT BRAWNSKI FLOPPIN' ON TH' HOOK!
WAIT A MINUTE! SEE THAT BIRD FOLLOWING THEM?
HOTEL

WINNIE WINKLE

HMMMM! SO TH' BIBBS PIN COMPNY IS CANCELLIN' TH' ZERO ZINC COMPNY ORDER--I WONDER WHY?
SO, BIBBSY IS GONNA START SUIT AGAINST TH' FUNY PIN COMP'NY!!
DAISY!!
AND MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS!!
WELL, GOSH-- A PERSON LIKES TO KNOW WHAT'S GOIN' ON IN TH' BUSINESS THEY'RE WORKIN' FER!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

AFTER MAKING GOOD HIS OWN GETAWAY, THE RENEGADE MEDICINE MAN LEAVES A KNIFE TO HELP KING ESCAPE...
IN JUST A FEW SECONDS THE WHOLE TRIBE WILL BE ON MY TRAIL!
I CAN'T HOPE TO OUTRUN THEM AFOOT!
IF ROGUE ISN'T TIED, A WHISTLE WILL BRING HIM!

DONALD DUCK

OZARK IKE

YER OUT!
SORRY, MISTUH SKELLEY. (PUFF-PUFF) I'M HEART-BROKEN, TOO, OZARK...
YOU JUST SAVED THIS GAME FOR US BY DRIVING ACROSS TH' TYING RUNS...
...NOW CATCH YOUR BREATH AND GET INTO LEFT FIELD!

PENNY

I JUST SIMPLY DEFINITELY ADORE THIS ONE! HOW MUCH IS IT?
FIFTEEN DOLLARS, MISS.
OH, DEAR, THAT'S POSITIVELY TOO STEEP! I MEAN, WHAT A SHAME!
ONE MOMENT, I'M AFRAID I MADE A MISTAKE!
THE PRICE TAG SAYS, FIVE DOLLARS.
OH, I SEE...
IN THAT CASE WILL YOU SHOW ME SOMETHING A BIT BETTER?

MARK TRAIL

THIS IS MARK TRAIL, LAURA... HE AND I WERE TENTMATES IN A BOYS' CAMP ONCE!
AND I WARN YOU, $15, TO WATCH YOUR STEP... YOU KNOW HOW THESE TALL SILENT MEN ARE WITH THE GIRLS
PIPE DOWN, DUB, AND TELL ME WHAT A MOUNTIE IS DOING ON THIS OLD TUB!
BD OOOO
BOY, YOU'LL BE SURPRISED... COME BELOW AND I'LL SHOW YOU!

One way to get a ~~good~~ night's sleep!

. . . But we don't recommend it!

• A solid left hook to the jaw will definitely produce all the Slumber anyone can take . . . but you're likely to wake up with a bad headache in the morning.

• Every good heavyweight carries plenty of "Sleeping Equipment" in his two 6-ounce gloves . . . for his opponent.

• But we have an even better plan for giving the average citizen a good night's rest.

• All you need is a Good Bed . . . a Good Spring . . . and a Good Mattress . . . and then you simply let Nature take its course.

• You will not only Sleep like a top . . . but you'll wake up rested . . . relaxed . . . refreshed . . . and you won't feel like somebody slugged you for a knockout count.

• All of which prompts us to suggest that you take time out, right now, while you're thinking about it . . . and look over your own bedroom equipment with a critical eye.

• If it's antiquated (and most bedding in America is, by actual survey) . . . then you ought to do something about it.

• Don't wait until the Mattress sags in the middle, the slats fall out, and the Spring caves in. Your Bedding should be revitalized, re-examined, and replaced, just like your wardrobe or your car.

• Incidentally, we have all the answers to these Slumber Problems . . . with the newest equipment modern science has devised . . . Mattresses that are so light and fluffy that they almost breathe . . . Springs so perfectly designed and engineered that they rest and relax every nerve and muscle . . . and Beds the finest decorators are raving about.

• So, if you want to wake up bright and early every morning, make a date with yourself bright and early tomorrow . . . and pay a profitable visit to the Slumber Shop at The Hecht Co.
